THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

"First the blade, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear"

India snaps back

The Monitor's view

Speaking of human rights, India has given the world an extraordinarily moving demonstration of a nation's love of freedom. Through peaceful balloting tens of millions of Indians, many of them impoverished and illiterate, have repudiated the authoritarian rule of Indira Gandhi. The system of parliamentary democracy in this dominant nation of South Asia is vibrantly alive, a fact that should buoy the forces of freedom everywhere.

The broad judgment can be made that the economic justice pursued so zealously by Mrs. Gandhi was not sufficient to surmount the public's frustration of living under her often-draconian emergency measures. Democracy has not had such a long history in India. It has also had its grave flaws. But it is polgnantly apparent now that it has given Indians something they value, a system in which the many different regional, ethnic, and religious groups of India's huge population can have a voice in their gov-

Mrs. Gandhi miscalculated. She presumably thought the nation was in sufficiently good economic shape to enable her to weather any challenge to her rule. Indeed the progress made in the 20 months of dictatorial administration is noteworthy. Inflation is under control and food bins are brimming over. The economy is growing at a respectable rate. More order and discipline is observable in society. There is less profiteering, corruption, and hoarding.

Yet the question is whether these gains would not have been possible without suspending civil libertles — jailing political opponents, muzzling the press, weakening the courts, and bending the Constitution and the law to the Prime Minister's own convenience. The tragedy for many critics is that many of Mrs. Gandhi's worthy objectives could have been achieved without eroding the nation's demo-

No less were Indian voters resentful of Mrs. Gandhi's promotion of her own son to considerable personal power. Sanjay Gandhi was roundly trounced in the constituency where he was making his first bid for Parliament, a defeat which probably reflected also the public opposition to his vigorous efforts to promote forced sterilization of men.

Where does India go from here? An era has come to an end. For the first time the nation has had a peaceful turnover of government and Indians now will see what the opposition can do in power. The challenge before the new leadership will be to show it is capable of constructive not destructive government, of promoting stability not chaos (as Mrs. Gandhi charged of her opponents). The Congress Party, for its part, which has dominated the Indian scene for almost three decades, will have to rebuild itself if it is to play a leading role again.

In the broadest sense, the task in New Delhi will be to put India firmly back on the path of political democracy and to prove that democracy is not irrelevant to social and economic progress. The contribution India can make to mankind's strivings for freedom and economic betterment is immense. It is to be hoped that the defeat of Mrs. Gandhi heralds a renewed running against the "ins" - in this case Presi- municipal gains into the second Sunday of baldent Giscard d'Estaing and the center-rightist loting; usually the left does better in the first alliance of parties. The second round of round than the second. French municipal elections has confirmed a The result is that the President's right-wing steady leftward trend in voting patterns there. rival now has an official post, as well as allies One result is that the opposition leftist alliance among the Gaullist members of the Giscard of Socialists and Communists now controls Cabinet. And the prospects for a leftist victory about 70 percent of French cities with a population of over 30,000 people, giving the coalition cialist leader François Mitterrand put it. "A a strong power base for the national elections strong wind is blowing and the country has scheduled for next year.

those of the left. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing re- year, especially if the center-rightists manage ceived another setback when his hand-picked candidate for mayor of Paris was defeated by the man he ousted from the premiership, has exploited it well. In some instances, for ex-Gaullist Jacques Chirac. Now Mr. Chirac too ample, the Communists were able to win conhas a prestigious platform from which to trol of cities in Socialist areas because the launch future campaigns for national power, as stronger Socialists cooperated by allowing well as for vigorous attacks on the Socialists. Communists to run on their tickets. But most leftist swing. One is French concern over the Paris still remain in center-right hands. nation's economic situation. Another is sentiment that the center-right faction has had couragement for the French leader and his enough time (nearly 20 years) to solve supporters. It will remain for a future day at France's problems and that the left should be the polls to show whether or not Frenchmen given a chance to prove its claim it can run are ready to put leftists in control of the nathings better. A third is an apparent lack of enunisiasm for President Giscard d'Estaing and - cils. But the trend at present is in that direchis moderate policies. Such factors as these tion, and the President may have to name the enabled the Socialist-Communist combine for day sooner than expected.

As in India, in France, too, the electoral tide is the first time in two decades to continue its next year are considerably improved. As Sosensed it." But it remains to be seen if the left-But not all the victories at the polls were ists can hold onto their momentum until next to mend their differences in the interim.

The rift is deep, however, and the opposition city halls now will have Socialist mayors, al-There are a number of explanations for the though a number of major cities in addition to

All in all, the elections provided little en-

Mirror of opinion

The only plan for Rhodesia?

Against the odds, Rhodesian Prime Minister Ian Smith has freed his party of its most reactainly the most moderate of his adversaries, tionary element. For the first time, black opposition Members of Parliament voted with the whelming internal support. If Bishop Muzo-Rhodesian Front in order to save the Smith rewa decides to fight Mr. Smith at a referen-Government and to prevent a damaging, probably counter-productive, general election. This is a hopeful break in the Rhodesian logjam. would get a sound thrashing. But he would be Unquestionably, Mr. Smith is now in a more content. He would have found, perhaps even central position and better placed than he has been for many years to reach for a negotiated settlement. He needs to establish an indispulable leader of black Rhodosians (not the stooge Chirau) and then come to terms with

One way to achieve the first objective is to has proved his popular support would ultidum on settlement terms, he would mobilise black support. On the face of it, Mr. Smith made, the man with whom he must negotiate.

The main hurdle will remain, of course. Mr. Smith will then have to produce terms for transition to black rule acceptable to the bishop. If he is able to do this, there is little doubt that a black-ruled Rhodesia led by a nationalist who hold a referendum, hoping that Bishop Abel , mately gain acceptance by the Western

'Hold still'

Brezhnev's bluntness

ter's outspoken advocacy of human rights cuship has made it quite clear that improwould arouse indignation in the Kremlin. relations with the West does not mean and Hence Leonid Brezhnev's tough speech assait- of the ideological struggle. The Soviels of ing the United States for using the issue to interfere in the Soviet Union's internal affairs and to give favored treatment to ensure the personal treatment to the state of the state comes as no surprise. Mr. Brezhnev's prestige whose views are not appreciated by West is on the line and, in the Soviet context, he governments. As for "not interfering in the could do no less than warn publicly that U.S. terms affairs of other countries," this sub-Soviet relations could be impaired if Mr. Carter persists in his policy. That he should do this just before Secretary Vance lands in Moscow communist rule if they had the opportunity fits in with Soviet pressure tactics.

But two things interest us about Mr. Brozh-struggle goes on — and of course it does nev's speech. One is that, while his comments there is no reason why the United Sales on human rights were accelerated to on human rights were explicitly blunt, he did should not give strong moral and spiritules not foreclose the possibilities of moving forward in the most crucial areas of Soviet-American relations: strategic areas of Soviet-Amerstandards and human values which deposits ican relations: strategic arms control, a reduc-tion of forces in Europe, the Middle East, and trade. The Pustions of class and mutual criticism and mutual criticism and mutual criticism. The Russians are clearly eager to break what they call the "stagnation" in relations. decide for themselves which so Brezhnev devoted the bulk of his speech to worthy and which not. these subjects.

Second, we are struck that the more the Soviet leadership seeks to defend its own position on human rights the more it exposes itself and the more it seems to justify the West's growing moral assertiveness. Take, for instance, this statement by the Communist leader: "As rejoin in the same vein; "As to the West, we do not interfere in the internal affairs of other countries although, of course, we have quite a definite opinion about the order reigning in the world of communism, and do not conceal this

The fact is that the Russians have always felt free to comment, through their controlled press and often in the most scurribus tones, on the deficiencies of Western societies. Since the

It was to be expected that President Car Inception of detente, in fact, the Soviet kill

Monday, March 28, 1977

this statement by the Communist leader: "As to the Soviet Union, we do not interfere in the internal affairs of other countries although, of course, we have quite a definite opinion about the order reigning in the world of imperialism, and do not conceal this opinion."

Yes, Mr. Brezhnev? If such is the case, the United States and other Western nations might rejoin in the same vein: "As to the West, we stands to reason it may as to estand to reason it

Mr. Carter will have to find and mains the right balance. But Mr. Brezhiev and the colleagues should not complain when the colleagues out to less out to l

WEEKLY INTERNATIONAL EDITION

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

Super two duel for bombs and allies

U.S. defense budget: wasteful or wise?

By John Dillin

manpower costs, wasteful management

Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

How much "fat" is left in U.S. defense spending? Budget-cutters on Capitol Hill are convinced there is plenty including things like too many weapons systems, excessive

But many defense specialists in the White House and in Congress say the cutting has gone far enough, especially now, in the midst of arms talks in Moscow with the Hussians, This is the moment, they say, to show U.S. determination and strength - not to cut budgets.

The debate exploded into the open March 28, when the House Budget Committee slashed another $4.2 billion from President Carter's already slimmed-down defense budget for fiscal year 1978 (which begins Oct 1).

The committee's action - branded as "completely wild" by opponents — almost assures a heated fight before the full House in April. It also increases pressure on the Senate Budget Committee, which is about to take up defense spending. Here's what has happened up to now:

- Former President Ford, in his final spending proposals, included $123.1 billion in budget authority for defense.

- President Carter, who had vowed to trim defense outlays, cut the Ford budget to $120.1 billion, down $3 billion.

- Four major congressional committees came in with simllar figures (House Armed Services Committee recommended $120.9 billion; House Appropriations, $120.4 billion; Senate Armed Services, $121.3 billion; Senate Appropriations, $121.8

But the House Budget Committee, which sets spending targets, charged that the White House had overlooked many areas for savings. In a split decision, the committee slashed Mr. Carter's budget down to $116 billion.

"What this means," charges one congressional defense specialist, "is that the budget committee has wiped out all real growth in defense spending for the new year. If allowance is made for inflation, outlays would be down $900 million from

★Please turn to Page 25

Détente depends on Brezhnev

The Vance mission in Moscow may prove, in hindsight, to have been the last chance to restore the process of East-West bargaining initiated by the Nixon-Kissinger regime and to resume the momentum, stalled by Watergate, of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) and the other aspects of détente, such as trade,

Whether it is the last chance depends on how long Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev remains in power.

He has not lately traveled in the West, so the Central Intelligence Agency's chances of searching for clues to his state of health have been severely him-

The CIA has engaged some of the leading scholars in the field to study the problems of the Kremlin succession. One conclusion which no analyst can escape is that every Soviet succession has been accompanied by a power struggle in the course of which the usual Kremlin differences between hawks and doves have become more accentuated. Because the contending factions need to secure the support of the military and of the KGB's secret police apparatus, the new leadership tends to make concessions to them. This makes its foreign policies less accommodating and its domestic policies more conser-

This was the pattern when, after the death of Scalin, Party Secretary Nikita S. Khrushchev took on Prime Minister Georgi M. Malenkov and defeated him with the help of the military. After Mr. Khrushchev had paid his political debts to the military, he turned against their insatiable demands for the nation's resources - whereupon he was overthrown by Mr. Brezhnev, again with the help of the military.

Lesser powers take the self-interest route

By Joseph C. Harsch

World alignments are more flexible these days than they were during the era of the "cold war."

India is the latest, but not the first or only, country to edge away from Moscow and closer to Washington. Several more such swings are likely in the near future. Important further ones could happen.

It makes power politics a livelier game. Certainties have declined. Uncertainties are on the rise. There is more room for maneuver. Imaginative gambits can pay off handsomely in short-gains. At the moment Moscow seems likely to be the net

India under Indira Gandhi has been all but an ally of the Soviet Union. It claimed to be nonaligned, but its relationship grew steadily closer to Moscow from the 1971 war between India and Pakistan when an American carrier task force steamed into the Bay of Bengal as though to try to interfere with India's military victory over Pakistan.

Under India's new Prime Minister, Morarji Desai, India is expected to be at least honestly nonaligned. In his first public statement Mr. Desai declared, "If the Indo-Soviet friendship treaty involves any want of friendship with others then it will have to change."

It seems probable that the change will go further than just back to true nonalignment, Under Mrs. Gandlu, India opposed the establishment of American naval and air facilities in the Indian Ocean, Mr. Desai is expected to want an American presence at least sufficient to balance off Moscow's rising naval presence in those waters. Also, under Mrs. Gaudhi India did most of its military shopping in the Soviet Union. That scems likely to change with a swing back to West European or Perhaps even more importantly, in the larger picture, India is expected to cease acting as part of an attempted Soviet encirclement of China. Moscow's influence south and east of the Himalayas is likely to decline sharply, at least for the imme-

★Please turn to Page 25

Peter Rabbit: 75 years and 11 languages later

Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

"My dear Noel," wrote Beatrix Potter in 1893 to the fiveyear-old son of her former governess, "I don't know what to write to you, so I shall tell you a story about four little rabbits whose names were - Flopsy, Mopsy, Cottontail, and Pe-

Eight years later, in 1901, Miss Potter privately published 250 copies of "The Tale of Peter Rabbit," which had been reected by several publishers.

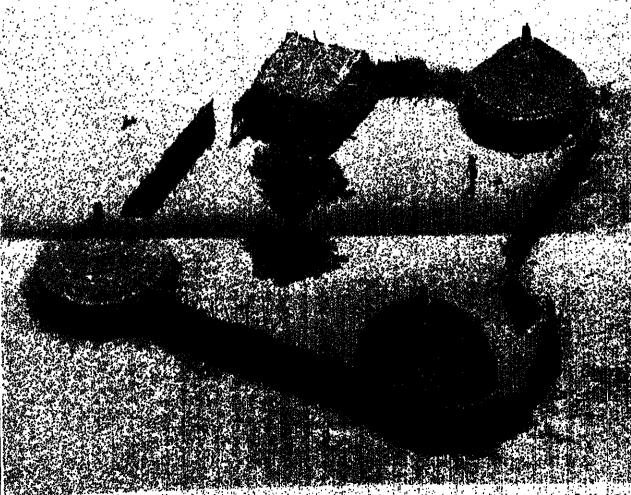

In the 75 years since, the publishers, Frederick Warne & Co. (which on the date of the first printing quickly rescinded their election), have sold some 20 million copies of that little book willen by a shy, introverted woman who lived on the third floor of her family's gloomy upper-crust home in South Ken-on the occasion of Peter Rabbit's 75th birthday, Warne has Published, "The History of the Tale of Peter Rabbit," and "Peier Rabbit's Natural Foods Cookbook," by Arnold Dobrin and illustrated by Beatrix Potter.

llowever, Peter Rabbit's birthday may mean the discovery of Bealrix Potter, artist, by many Americans. New York University's Gray Galieries is planning an exhibit of some 300 Bealrix Potter paintings (April 1-May 16) — paintings which are non-third to the state of the state o are usually at home in London's Victoria and Albert Museum.

"It is all the same, drawing, painting, modeling, the irresistible desire to copy any beautiful object which strikes the eye," she once wrote. "Why cannot one be content to look at it? I cannot rest, I must draw, however poor the result, and when I have a had time come over me it is a stronger desire than ller "bad times" were many. The only real freedom for her and her younger brother, Bertram, were summers spent in the Lake Country of Scotland. Miss Potter's official biographer, Margaret Lane ("The Tale of Beatrix Potter," first published by Warns in 1946) wrote that in Scotland, 'in white-washed stages whole families lived in a way which her instinct told her was sensible and right. The Hease turn to Page 22.

Walling off the desert - not as hopeless as it looks [Story, Page 18]

Highlights

law says yes to any black South African wanting to buy his own house. But the practical difficulties are almost insuperable. Page 11

HALTING THE DESERT. Villagers in a Sudanese oasis explain to the Monitor's Takashi Oka their feelings about plans to prevent the spread of the desert. Page 18

BRINGING UP JESSICA. A Monitor correspondent arranged to discuss childrearing with a knowledgeable father. But six-year-old Jessica had a better idea. Page 23

INDIA'S ELECTION. The issues that brought Mrs. Gandhi down are discussed by an informed columnist.

Index

ARTS/BOOKS 28
COMMENTARY 34, 35
EDUCATION 29
FINANCIAL 28
HOME 23
HOME FORUM 32, 33
PEOPLE 24
TRANSLATIONS 30, 31
TRAVEL 27

"THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

Founded in 1908 by Mary Baker Eddy An International Daily Newspaper

Editor of the weekly international Edition
Pamola March
Assistant editor: John Edward Young Published dely except Saturday, Sunday and Holidays in the U.S.A. Weekly international Edition (available outside of North American aditions and material prepared exclusively for the international Edition.

W T

ternetional Edition.

Subscription Rates.

North American Editions — One year $40, six months $24, firse months $12, single copy 254.

To place a new subscription in the continental United States, call this toll-free number — 800 225-7090. All other communications must be mailed to address below.

International Edition — One year $25, six months $12.50, single copy 80¢ (U.S.).

Surfeco stell postpaid throughout the world. Airmail rates upon recuest.

pon request.
Registered as a newspaper with the G.P.C., Loadon, England.
Address of the News. Circulation, or Advertising Representaworkess of the News Circulation, or Advertising Representa-tive in your community will be sent promptly on request For best service, changes of address should be received four weeks in advance. Changes are made for two weeks or more at any given address. ery given address Advertising rates given on application, White endeavoiring to accept only reliable advertisements. The Christian Solence Publishing Society will not be responsible to the public for adverissaments, and the right to docline or discontinue any advertisement is reserved.

IS reserved.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

4 - 5 Grosvonor Piace, London SWIX 7JH

Phone: 01-235-3298

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE PUBLISHING SOCIETY

One Norway Street, Boston, Mass. U.S.A. 02115

Phone: (817) 282-2300

FOCUS

British publishers 'invade' U.S. erations, according to the Merrimack official. But the end of the marketing agree

By Paul Van Slambrouck

Mr. Unwin and scores of other British world market was a likely target for antipublishers are seeming babes in the tangled trust action. woods of U.S. book publishing, because for It was this dramatic end to the traditional the market agreement — the decree stopped 30 years most of them have not sold books territorial marketing of English-language compliance with the agreement only on a directly to the U.S. public. But like Mr. Un. books that brought Mr. Unwin to the U.S. in industrywide basis, as the British intended win, a wave of British publishers now are March. moving to establish offices or subsidiaries Simply put, Mr. Unwin, chairman of the U.S. market has tantalized British au on this side of the Atlantic, and the migra- respected British publishing house of lishers for many years, and experts say the tively divided the English-speaking world alone in his effort to establish a publishing exported. into two markets. Instead of directly pub. foothold in the U.S. "rights." With these publishing rights, how- any more for the time being," comments from the selling of U.S. rights. ever, came more than the usual honoring of Bruce Johnson. Mr. Johnson represents Mr. Unwin, a past president of the Britis that included U.S. dependencies as well as known British publishers.

A consent decree signed in November put July. Merrimack will provide the necessary he says.

manpower and services. Mr. Johnson says the two publishers "buy" what ever portion of the staff they want for their operation The decision to establish a presence in the U.S. was the result of many considerations, according to the Merrimack offiment was "the 2-by-4 that hit British publishers in the head and got them thinking seriously about U.S. subsidiaries," he says.

Reading, Massachusetts an end to compliance with this agreement A list of British publishers in the U.S. two "We have no knowledge of marketing in by 21 American publishers after prosecution years ago, when the legal battle began was the U.S., but we're very sophisticated when by the U.S. Justice Department. The deciit comes to Sierra Leone," quips Rayner sion carried the implicit threat that any according to a tabulation by College Mar. Unwin with more than a touch of dry Brit- other U.S. publisher "conspiring" with the keting, a sales and consulting firm for nine British publishing industry to divide the publishers, including Allen & Unwin.

lishers from continuing with the concept of it from the beginning. However, the size of George Allen & Unwin, Ltd., of London is end of the policy has "galvanized" their is The reason is the termination last year of trying to sell books, instead of rights, in the terest in coming into the American marks the 30-year-old arrangement known as the United States. To achieve this he has directly. Mr. Unwin points out that 50 per-British Traditional Market Agreement. This formed a subsidiary, Allen & Unwin, Inc., in cent of British books are sold outside that "convenience," as Mr. Unwin calls it, effec- Reading, Massachusetts. Mr. Unwin is not country; only 8 percent of U.S. books are

George Allen & Unwin of London Hishing in each other's "territories," American and British publishers sold each other publishers, and we've decided not to accept 10 percent of which has traditionally been the domestic territory. The British pur- Merrimack Books, a marketing and ware- Publishers Association, says most of the chased rights from U.S. publishers for noth- housing outfit that recently set up offices in peers are "not happy about the decre" ing less than what was once the British Em. Lawrence, Massachusetts, for Paul Elck. However, he doesn't expect a free-few pire. U.S. publishers typically got rights Inc., and Faber & Faber, Inc., two well- with U.S. companies: "Publishers have ways been civilized to some degree als Both publishers opened U.S. offices last all we're dealing with a civilized product

Bulldozers roll the green back into Wales

By David Parry-Jones Special to The Christian Science Monitor

After a pause for planners to identify new targets, buildozers and earth-movers are once more rolling in Wales, and the drive to make the valleys green starts again.

Some £13 million will be spent in the next five years or so to reclaim land devastated by industry. The intention eventually is to provide green-field sites for new factories, houses. schools, parks, and recreation areas.

The recently-established Welsh Development Agency, which will operate the scheme and pay the bills on behalf of the Government, says that Wales has some of the worst industrial dereliction in the world.

That fact may seem to contradict the image so zealously projected by its Tourist Board, of a country rich in verdant meadowland, clearflowing rivers, tracts of golden, sandy beaches. and venerable castles to delight the visitor.

Thus it is important to emphasize that the dereliction is mainly confined to definite areas in the south and east of the Principality. There, 200 years ago, conditions were found to be ideal for the large-scale smelting of iron and copper and before long, huge reserves of coal were uncovered by speculators and entre-

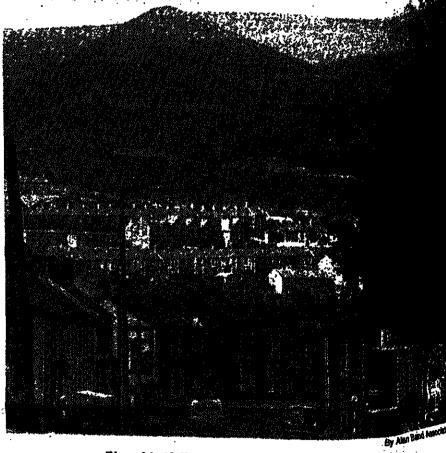

But early industrial man never "replaced the divots," so that regions like the Lower Swansen Valley, for example, and the Rhondda are still defaced by spoil heaps, disused quarries and mine-shafts, and abandoned industrial installations.

Here the land resembles a moonscape wasteland dotted with scabrous remains of offices and ancient plant-housings. Not a pretty

And of course an earlier notorious example, now mercifully removed, was the immense coal-rip above Aberian, which a decade ago avalanched down upon the little village killing nearly 150 people including 110 children.

"Our new program will rehabilitate a further 2000 acres of such territory," says Sir David Davies, chairman of the Welsh Agency. "It is bound to make a grand contribution to improving the quality of life here."

But will the £13 million be money wellspent? Because of the period at which they were developed, when predominantly rural Wales was being industralized and urbanized for the first time, much of the terrain to be reclaimed lies near the hearts of towns and

Rhondda Valley: still defaced by spoll heaps

Hence they will become prime sites when South Wales has the biggest procleared and landscaped for industry and hous- therefore stands to gain most the

"We shall demolish a redundant power station on the banks of the River Usk," promises Sir David Davies, "which will free 25 acres for fresh industrial use.

"Close to the town of Newport, it will be only an hour and a half's journey from London by road or rail, and ought to tempt any ex-

"Likewise the 50 acres which will be cleared on the edge of Cardiff's dockland, close to one of the British Steel Corporation's major be more pleasing to those who live as bere as well as to industrialists and industrialists and industrialists and industrialists and industrialists and industrialists."

ing. And if the planners choose to turn them into parks instead, there will be plenty of citizens to enjoy the new facilities.

This county could be required in the project, with £5½ million earning the project and £5½ million earning the £ ings which once disgorged millions of ings steam coal each year now stand foron, and an affront to they eye.

But £800,000 will be allocated to Dylos of the West Wales tourist circuit, to the remains of old lead mines, and leastly les will be undertaken in the northwest Snowdonia National Park, where

Britain's 1977-78 budget

Healey keeps one eye on unions, one eye on bankers

By Geoffrey Godsell Overseas news editor of The Christian Science Monitor

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

British Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis llealey's proposed income tax cuts for his countrymen, coupled with tax increases on gasoline and cigarettes, are simed at satislying the two giants looking over his shoulder as he drafted his budget for the coming financial vear.

These two glants are: • The International Monetary Fund, which granted Britain a $3.9 billion loan last December on condition that the government did not increase public borrowing beyond a $14.7 billion ceiling - and kept tight control over the overall money supply.

• The British trade unions, sometimes in alllance with Labour's Left, which have been

Jim Browning

Special to

The Christian Science Monitor

Last year, the theme was "Police Patrol in the Metro." In response to an increase in muggings and thefts in Paris subways, police raided problem stations and "verified the iden-

This year the theme is "Music in the

The police are still there, patrolling in small groups and pairs. But the Public Transport Authority (RATP) has decided that the real solution to the subway problem is to make the Metro more human and less cave-like.

As a result, 20 of the Metro's underground caves rang with rock, chimed with classical music, beat with jazz, and generally came alive to the sounds of Latin-American, Algerian, Celtic, and folk music. The "Music in the Metro" festival, from March 23 to 26, brought vance of what the French call "Manhattan sur

[on the] Seine." With new high-rise buildings marking the city's skyline, with people finding less and less time for leisurely lunches, and with big-city anonymity already making crowded subway trains a trial to ride, the

At the end of last week, American-style jazz and French accordion music filtered out of the Auber station near the Opera, where 100,000 people are soon expected to be funneling through at peak hours for a suburban rapid-

RATP is hoping to brighten things up.

ransit service to be finished this year.

tity" of suspicious-looking travelers.

Music in the metro

pushed their standard of living back to where to the average worker. it was three years ago.

Mr. Healey's basic problem was to satisfy these two giants simultaneously. The Labour Government needs to carry the trade unions with it if it is to succeed in its policies to stop Britain's economic decline. Above all, it is essential for the government to secure union cooperation for a third year in voluntary wagerestraint - and the negotiations for this thirdyear compact are coming up.

With an eye on this, Mr. Healey has made the full application of his income tax cuts dependent on the outcome of successful negotiations with the unions on wages. In full, the cuts would amount to $3.72 billion. But if the unions do not agree to wage restraint, only $850 million of the total will become effective. Reuter pressing for some alleviation for workers since reports that application of full income-tax cuts increases in the budget - introduced by Mr. definitive return to economic well-being. llealey in Parliament March 29 - in the taxes throughout the European Common Market.

quarter of next year."

well have satisfied the IMF with his budget militant unions and their demands.

inflation (still running at 16 percent) has would amount to a pay increase of 4.5 percent presentation (if his figures and forecasts are correct) and have come up with a tax pattern The tax increase on gasoline amounts to the in which the unions will grudgingly acquiesce. equivalent of 7 cents on a (U.S.) gallon, and on But he is still saddled with the long-range probclearettes to the equivalent of 7 cents on a lem of establishing a climate that genuinely encourages the investment, modernization, and Contrary to earlier forecasts, there were no productivity in industry essential to Britain's

Europe

There is still the need, of course, to get the on alcoholic beverages, pipe tobacco, or in the acquiescence of the unions to continued wage value-added tax, a form of sales tax used restraint. The more militant unions have been to some extent weakened in Parliament over Mr. Healey said the main purpose of his bud- the past 10 days. This is because of Prime Minget is "to contribute to getting inflation down ister James Callaghan's deal with the Liberals, to the level of our competitors and to improv- under which he has in effect bought Liberal ing the performance of our manufacturing in- support until at least the fall. This lessens dustries. . . . There is a real prospect of get- somewhat Mr. Callaghan's dependence on his ting inflation into single figures by the second own left-wingers for survival in parliamentary votes. And the left-wingers have traditionally At this stage it looks as if Mr. Healey may been the most vocal supporters of the more

Paris, officials say, must remain a place of leisurely lunches and of quiet moments by the Seine 200 paid musicians into the plastic and concrete halls as one of the first phases in an two instruments, as well as a trumpeter, a overall renovation program.

Metro officials are hoping to prevent the adsinger, and more accordion music in other parts of the underground system.

The musical festival was taken with a grain of salt by the city's "buskers," the guitarists and other musicians who earn a living playing in the Metro for handouts. Until recently, they ran the risk of being thrown out by the police. But authorities decided a few weeks ago to formally accept the itinerants, who, unless they are too pushy trying to collect money, are usually viewed favorably by subway travelers.

The festival cost $20,000 to pay the 200 musicians, plus the expenses of a publicity firm. When it was over, Metro officials planned to return the stations to the buskers.

In the stylish Left Bank Montparnasse sec-To the annoyance of the now-official musilion, the Metro station offered a violin and a cians, however, the RATP plans to issue three-ated them," sald one Metro official, "Now we will regularize them."

Presently, the buskers enforce a sometimestough social order among themselves, protecting the rights of the strongest or most senior to the choicest territory: notably where the most people pass or where there is room to glop and fish into one's pocket.

The buskers say they doubt the new regulations will change things much.

What has changed most noticeably in the Metro is the conditions in 23 stations. The RATP says it receives thousands of letters from people who complain that the Metro is gloomy. Because you can travel anywhere on one ticket and transfer at will, the underground network is full of long, damp tunnels, wide variety of caffsmen demonstrating their leading up and down stairs, around corners, skills.

clavicord, playing Handel's sonata for those month permits. "For 10 years we have toler- and connecting different train lines in the sta-

The face-lifting effort, which has lasted several years, has concentrated on repainting and plasticizing. Moulded plastic chairs, in plnk, purple, green, orange, and blue, sometimes shock the eye but also increase the seating space. Walls are frequently painted in bright colors to match.

The music festival, whose entertainers attracted more than 100 spectators at a time in some of the larger stations, and entertained the thousands who strolled past, was generally viewed as a success. The RATP now is working on plans for a painting festival and an artisans' week, which would bring together a Tight belts today mean full wallets tomorrow, Portuguese told By Helen Gibson the nationalized and government controlled purgings of managers in industry and business Mr. Soares's reshulfle brought into the Cabi-

The Christian Science Monitor

The government here has launched a masbetter Portugal for the future.

Paper advertisements appeal to the nation to dustry. work harder for less. The underlying theme of The government has been pouring money the campaign is an appeal to the Portuguese to into this industry, mopping up deficits mountaccept a government austerity program that ing toward the $450 million mark to maintain that the industry. has limited wage increases while allowing jobs in hopes of a recovery. Hotel workers are prices to rise.

living index, excluding housing, could jump up but they have so far held oft. by 30 percent this year but that the govern-

The labor unions have not been pleased with the measures, but because of the financial crisis facing most companies, particularly in the measures, but because of the financial companies, particularly in the communists introduced into the government lexicon to account for their massive ries and fields."

sector, they have been leery or pr their demands with much more than just threats of strikes.

The most powerful unions are mostly concentrated in sectors where the number of techsive campaign to persuade the Portuguese of nically bankrupt firms outnumber the viable the need for hardships now in order to build a ones. The former are only being kept alive by the steady influx of government aid. An ex-Every day television commercials and news-

still threatening strikes for wage increases Prime Minister Mario Soares said the cost of which would cost another $15 million a year, ment would limit salary increases to 15 per-

The reshuffle of the Socialists' eight-monthold Cabinet last week could be the first stop toward the development of a new rationale for state-controlled firms - which account for about 30 percent of the business sector. The key Cabinet changes were the naming of new Labor, Commerce, and Industry Ministers charged with putting their respective houses in

During the swearing-in ceromony for the new ministers and a dozen-odd secretaries and undersecretaries, President Antonio Ramalho Eanes echoed the government's stress on the need for hard and willing work, and less politics.

"In the labor sector we must obtain a con-Meanwhile Mr. Scares advised that any such certed effort that assures the conscientibus. to rebuild the country's foreign reserves - Portuguese workers in the creation of a new links to the Socialist Party. The new industry Minister. Nobre de Costa, was active and highly regarded as administrator of the national petroleum company, Sacor, during the former right-wing regime. The new Commerce Minister, Mora Pinto, is a Colmbra University law professor who resigned from the centrist Social Democratic Party last year in protest against its right-wing leahings. Both new ministers are described as independents with leftof-center political leanings.

The changes were seen as an attempt by Mr. Soares to broaden the Socialist minority goverument's base of support and improve its performance in the economic field. Despite the recent devaluation of the Portuguese currency and new austerity measures, the government's policy has been criticised for being too slow and for not going far enough to cope with the enormous economic crisis facing the country.

Europe

A birthday present for the European Community

Members take small, but realistic, steps towards unity

By Takashi Oka

Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Under the cloudless blue skies of this eternal city, where cherry blossoms and wisteria and all other manner of flowers are in bloom, the European Community marked its 20th anniversary. With quiet ceremony and subdued pronouncements, the chiefs of the nine EC member states took another few steps forward toward thinking and behaving as a community rather than as a helter-skelter assortment of

The steps are small because all the big steps have either been taken or remain blocked by national egotisms. As Luxembourg's Prime Minister Gaston Thorn has said: "On Sunday we discoursed on the need to find community solutions, and from Monday on we obey our nationalist reflexes."

The nine agreed to let Roy Jenkins, president of the European Community's Executive Commission, attend the coming economic summit meeting of the world's 7 richest nations in London May 7 and 8.

EC representation at the London conference is seen as an important concession by the larger EC states - France, West Germany, Britain, and Italy - which would be attending the summit in their own right, along with the United States, Canada, and Japan. Europe's smaller nations wanted this assurance that their interests would be directly represented.

Some agreements reached

The nine agreed to take a common position in the socalled North-South dialogue favoring the establishment of a "Common Fund," a scheme to help developing nations stabi-

The details have yet to be worked out. But Prime Minister James Callaghan of Britain, current chairman of the European Council of chiefs of government, said he expected Europe and the United States to work out a common position before the dialogue with the developing nations resumes in Paris in May.

The nine agreed to tackle unemployment - totalling over five million in the community - with specific community measures to help women and young people.

The nine plan to increase the EC's borrowing capacity. The aim is not only to help members cover balance-of-payments problems, as in the case of Italy, but to encourage the restructuring and modernizing of industry.

EC leaders once again warned Japan to reduce its $4 billion trade surplus by increasing imports from Europe.

Steel plan accepted

The nine accepted the Commission's recommendations on reorganizing the community's steel industry to counter the challenge of Japan's ultra-efficient mills.

And they have approved the idea of a European foundation to preserve and promote European culture.

These steps are not extraordinary. The heady enthusiasm of 20 years ago has given way to a much less grandiose sense of what can be achieved. Yet the heads of government who gathered in the soaring frescoes grand hall of Bernini's Barberini Palace might not go as far as French Socialist leader François Mitterand, who said sarcastically. "When Europe opens its mouth, it yawns.'

prudence, and that what has been achieved so far is not to gible — a customs union, a common agricultural policy, ac

Direct elections in '78?

The promise of a directly elected European Parliamed only Italy has so far taken all the domestic legislative as necessary to hold elections during the target year of mil comes next, and could for the first time give the Runge idea a real constituency among the ordinary voters of s member state.

Many of the chiefs of government have domestic policy troubles. Belgium and the Netherlands face elections for Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti rules by sufferance of the Communists, French President Giscard d'Estaing las g seen the opposition Socialist-Communist alliance sweep ncc ipal elections, and British Prime Minister James Calagsurvives only with the help of the 13-seat Liberal put Is Germany has by fur the strongest economy of the sleet Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, like some of his colleague, i. with a thin majority.

The chiefs of government who gathered here by March 25 and 26 know by experience that individual stage are not enough to keep European heads above the switze ters of economic crisis.

The European Community's latest joint efforts many small. Yet they are evidence of a growing sense of the work together. Increasingly, Europe recognizes that a:: its economic equilibrium and be heard with respective the United States and the Soviet Union, its member EC leaders would say rather that reality has taught them sovereignties to a union that is only defining itself by sign must progressively surrender chunks of their prize E.

European Communists no longer get U.S. coldshoulde

By Jim Browning Special to The Christian Science Monitor

The Carter administration has been quietly moving to improve relations with European Communist parties, apparently preparing for the possibility of continuing good relations with governments that could eventually include Communist cabinet ministers.

This marks a clear change from the positions taken by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger toward European Communist parties. But in many ways it appears to be a change of tactics rather than policy.

There is still every indication that the United States would be unhappy to see Communists take on positions in European governments. The difference is that while Mr. Kissinger made his opposition to Communist government members publicly clear, Mr. Carter and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance have instead Mr. Vance and Vice-President Walter F. Monstressed their intention to continue close ties to

Two nations especially

The two countries most concerned are France and Italy. In legislative elections now one year away, France's opposition coalition of him that if the left won control of the govern-Socialists and Communists is widely given bet-ment in Freance, it would pose no problem for ter-than-even prospect of taking control of Parliament from the current center-right coalition.

West German investments on two-way world street

By Philip W. Whitcomb Special correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

West Germany - alone among the major industrial nations to produce a consistent trade surplus these days - records nearly $20 billion worth of directly controlled private business investments in foreign countries.

But foreign investors also bold nearly $20 billion worth of directly controlled business investments in West Germany. Germany has direct investments of about $2 billion in each of four countries: the United States, France, Switzerland, and Belgium. Direct investment in Germany is far more one-sided. U.S. investments total nearly $8,billion. Switzerland holds less than $3 billion worth of German investments and the Netherlands has $2.4 billion.

That would possibly lead to Communist participation in the Cabinet

In Italy, while the Communists hold no important executive offices, they hold the balance of power in Parliament.

About a year ago Dr. Kissinger and more quietly NATO supreme allied commander Alexander Haig said that the United States would have problems in military cooperation with any nation that had Communist government

That and some quieter diplomatic warnings were taken as threats in Italy and France. Mr. Carter specifically criticized those statements during his presidential campaign, charging that they simply pushed the European Communists closer to the Soviets.

Visitors received

When a delegation of French Socialist leaders visited the United States just before the Carter inauguration, they were received by dale. The French Socialists returned from Washington saying that the United States would not try to interfere with French elec-

According to Jean-Pierre Cot, a leading Socialist member of Parliament, Mr. Vance told

The clearest indication of the limits of the new administration's openness to the left came in February when an intergovernmental orgawestern European Union admitted two Italian Communists and one French Communist, all members of their home parliaments, to its commission on armaments. The U.S. State Department then announced that during an upcoming visit of this commis-sion to the United States, the program would be cut back. Arrangements were also made to remove sensitive material from the commission's briefings.

That indicated that the Carter administration could also be concerned about eventual military cooperation with a government in which Communists had access to secrets.

Slow approach taken

Overall, the Carter administration has gone slowly in its relations with the European Left. Sources say it has handed out no new directives to embassies, but there are indications that contacts are improving:

• In Rome the new American Ambassador, Richard Gardner, paid a courtesy call to the president of the Chamber of Deputies, a Com-

of the U.S. law controlling visits by foreign po- fairs in which he said the French Comlitical extremists, the State Department has Party would not try to do away what arranged a visa for the Communist Mayor of party democracy if the Left comes to party Florence, expected to make a ceremonial visit. He wrote that Communists would be 685 long talk a little over one month ago with Jean though the Communists would like to the Kanapa, the Communist Party's top inter- trenty renegotiated. national affairs expert. Reports circulated that the two diplomats had given Mr. Kanapa an assurance that the U.S. Government would not tration and to indicate that he hopes the oppose a government of the Left, but sources insisted that was not true.

Flexibility reflected

3 · 5

Antique Kazak

GREGORIAN'S is constantly buying used Oriental rugs from estates and private parties. We deal in stric-confidence and our reputation la your assurance

BUYING OR SELLING

The Gregorian Family

Gregorian inc.

"INTERNATIONAL ORIENTAL RUG MERCHANT8"

2284 Washington Street

Newton Lower Falls

Massachusetts 02162

(617 244-2553)

BE A MONITOR DC

of being fairly treated.

Deal with confidence

Left's approval of the Carter government's position, Mr. Kanapa recently published an ar- Left is most likely to win the 1978 election

• In an apparent effort to relax enforcement title in the American magazine Foreg • In Paris two American diplomats held a continuing French membership a 3300 ft

> Mr. Kanapa apparently used the media American government will remain open 115 idea of Communist cabinet members

The French Left in general bas The meeting itself, however, reflected the cheered by reports from Washington it

Ads are judged by the company they keep.

Whether you're a local retailer or a nationwide company, when you adverlise in The Christian Science Monitor you in shoulders with quality advertisers from throughout the world. Your ad appears to the atmosphere of trust and reliability that are so much a part of the Monitor's reputation.

Just as readers depend on the Monitor lo accuracy and honesty in reporting the find they can depend on its advertises in the same way. And so they respond and respond . . . and respond. isn't that what you're looking for?

For more information about how to read these these responsive readers at a reasonable cost, call Alex Swan in Boston, toll free at 800-225-7090. (Except Massachusetts, G him collect at 617-262-2300:)

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONTOR

America's nationwide daily newspapel for the family

Will the 200-Mile Fishing Zone Serve Mankind?

As you may recall, we expressed our thoughts on this matter under a somewhat similar headline last August. At that time, we stated that a nation which has to depend on the sea for food should not be deprived of the use of the sea. We also emphasized our position by saying that since the rule of the sea is a matter which concerns mankind's food problem, any new rule about the sea should be established only by general agreement at the United Nations Law of the Sea Conference.

Since then, however, one country after another has declared a 200-mile fishing zone following the United States' unilateral decision to establish such a zone.

We realize that establishment of a 200-mile zone is fast becoming a worldwide tendency. However, we wonder what the 200-mile fishing zone would mean for today if such zones were utilized merely to divide sea resources based on exclusivism. This is evident in the following consideration:

If the confusion at the Law of the Sea Conference is to be ended, and if the imbalance above in fishing zones quickly solved, it is necessary to return to the original spirit that led to the 3rd U.N. Law of the Sea Conference. We recall that eminent speech made by United Nations Ambassador Pardo of Malta, who in the U.N. General Assembly in 1967 warned against "the dangers of dividing the sea." Later, upon hearing of the concept of a 200-mile economic zone proposed by Kenya, Ambassador Pardo deeply deplored this. He reportedly said with disappointment that matters were developing contrary to his

It is therefore evident that countries adjacent to vast coastal waters, as well as the United States, bear a grave responsibility for the effective use of natural resources.

If all coastal countries should establish 200-mile zones, then 35 percent of all the oceans of the earth would literally be corralled by such countries. This 35 percent would contain 95 percent of all marine life.

Furthermore, there are great inequalities among the nations of the world. Some inequalities can be overcome by national efforts, but others cannot. Typical inequalities which cannot be overcome are the size of territorial land and the quantity of land resources. In terms of per capita land area and the quantity of land resources, inequalities are even larger. A look at the distribution of lishery resources shows that they are in the waters around those countries blessed with large land areas and rich land resources. Moreover, such countries do not fully exploit and do not need to exploit their marine resources by themselves. On the other hand, many small, densely populated countries lacking natural resources like Japan do not have sufficient fishery resources adjacent to them.

Under such circumstances, we believe that the new 200-mile fishery zone should not be used as a means of prohibiting foreign fishing boats from fishing within the zone. based simply on exclusivism. We also think that it should not be used as a means both for limiting fishing quotas of foreign boats and requesting them to bear unjustly high fees for fishing by restricting their activities within the zone that is considered unnecessary and impracticable from the viewpoint of conservation of resources.

The United States is imposing an "allocation" fee on foreign fishing vessels equal to 3.5 percent of the value of their catch within the 200-mile zone. However, this is evidently too high from a business standpoint because the average net revenue of foreign fishing operations off the U.S. coast as estimated by the U.S. authorities is 5 percent, which is actually higher than the profit-sales ratio of most Japanese fishing companies concerned. Also, the proposed fees would consume 70 percent of the fishermen's profit margin.

We earnestly hope, therefore, that the United States will continue its efforts to improve conditions in actually implementing the 200-mile fishing zone operations.

ion on the fisheries industry in Japan, please consect us at the address bifor Also we would like to hear your opinions on the abore.

Europe

European view of Carter's A-limits

Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

If President Carter follows through on the statements he is making about halting nuclear proliferation and respecting human rights, he should be willing to accept some limitations on American sovereignty.

This is the view of Stefano Silvestri, deputy director of the institute of International Affairs here in Rome, and a seasoned observer of transatlantic relations. Although Mr. Silvestri's opinions, as expressed in a recent interview, are his own, they reflect to some degree the fascination tinged with disquiet with which many Europeans watch the barrage of statements emanating from Washington these days.

"I agree," said Mr. Silvestri, "that nuclear proliferation and the export of nuclear technology should be controlled. I agree that human rights should form a basic part of the dialogue between East and West, North and South. I agree that foreign policy should not lose a moral dimension.

"The question is implementation. If what Mr. Carter says on preventing nuclear proliferation, on stopping reprocessing agreements and controlling the export of nuclear technology is right, it means that either the United States should become the only state to have any significant independent nuclear technology, or that it, too, should accept some kind of international

"We are coming back to the basic problems discussed in the [David E.] Lillenthal paper of 1945. There the choice was posed between national development and international or supranational development of nuclear technology.

"If one opts for national development, one loses the possibility of controlling nuclear development in the rest of the world. This consideration is still real. You can't ask West Germany, or Britain, or France not to export nuclear technology or to produce risky nuclear things unless there's some renunciation of American sovereignty as well, some surrender of power in this field to an international authority."

Similarly Mr. Silvestri said, on human rights, a verbal exercise is one thing. But "If you are imposing limitations, if you are saying nations must behave in a certain way, you will have to agree to reciprocal interference in domestic affairs through some kind of international institution - otherwise you will be turning the whole campaign into a kind of crusade

In some ways, Mr. Silvestri is more concerned about the effect of human-rights campaigns on North-South relations than on East-West. President Carter and his subordinates, Mr. Silvestri noted, have spoken out against racism in southern Af-

How are these statements to be followed up? Maybe the United States can do without Rhodesian chrome or South African uranium and gold. Disruption in Europe caused by a boycott would be greater

The impression he has, Mr. Silvestri said, (and it is one that has been expressed by observers in other European countries as well) is that while Mr. Carter has thought through carefully his seemingly off-the-cuff statements in regard to his own American public, he has not yet spelled out the costs. Nor has he indicated what he wants other countries to do, what share the United States is willing to take on, and what results can realistically be achieved.

The Europeans fear the effect of Soviet reactions to Mr. Carter's human-rights statements on détente. As they watch Secretary of State Cyrus Vance negotiating in Moscow, they fear superpower arms control agreements that could diminish the deterrent capacity of allied forces in Europe even if the overall East-West arms balance remains in equilibrium.

"If President Carter wants to be known as a man of change, he has got to establish a new framework of stability for this change." Which means consultations, and more than consultations - the working out of a policy that will fit all these disparate pieces - human rights, economic problems, energy, military questions - into a cohesive whole acceptable because it will be understood by the European allies.

Cummins boost Unique 1977 for Scotland

"Essence of France"

HOLIDAY Castle Holels, Guisine and Cruises of France.

July 10 to August 1 or Beptember 4 to September 26

LIMITED TO 28 QUESTS

prompettor and Brochers: TRAVEL TIME M. Side St. Chloago; (Illing) Phiose; (112) 728-7 197 workers will joint the company once the expansion plans take effect.

Central Scotland has attracted at least 20 large U.S. companies within the past 25

A large boost to Scotland's ailing engineering industry

Cummins has added a $51 million investment to engineering plants in central

Scotland and will soon recruit a large number of new employees in an area of high

It is expected that 1,400

unemployment.

has come from the U.S.-based Cummins Engine Company.

United States

Even Republicans like Carter's voting reform

By Richard L. Strout Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

could transform the Republican Party as well tisan debate. as the election process as a whole. A remarkable political fact noted here is the degree of Republican leadership support ac- Quincy Adams over Andrew Jackson. In 1876, corded the revolutionary proposals in Con- and again in 1888, the Electoral College picked add a possible 25 million voters to presidential ity of the popular vote. elections - and some estimate that two out of three would be Democrats.

ported the program: Senate minority leader Howard W. Baker Jr. (R) of Tennessee, House 1978. minority leader John J. Rhodes (R) of Arizona, and William Brock, Republican Party chair-

The second major Carter proposal would abolish the Electoral College by constitutional amendment, this might give advantage to small states, many of which tend to vote Re-

R. Ford of Michigan led the successful fight in that it would promote fraud. Former President the House of Representatives to get the necessary two-thirds vote for an amendment to abol- poses instant registration. The least the potenish the college. The effort failed in the Senate tial voter can do is to make one or two adafter a filibuster, but Senate filibuster rules have been modified since then.

Ex-President Gerald Ford reiterated to a breakfast group here March 26 that he wants Brock-Rhodes endorsement, In 1974, a "registhe Electoral College abolished. He recalled

"There is a very high degree of unanimity . . that we should do away with what I label as the archaic, outdated method that we have this instance seems based on the belief that the been using for the last 180 years or thereabouts party must widen its base in any case. It is enfor electing the president of the United

A constitutional amendment to abolish the Electoral College requires three-fourths approval of state legislatures, in addition to two-Washington thirds majorities in Congress. Gerald Ford's President Carter's twofold electoral reforms past strong support should help prevent a par-

In 1824, an Electoral College deadlock threw the election into the House, which picked John Republican Presidents (Rutherford B. Hayes Mr. Carter's universal registration bill would and William Henry Harrison) who got a minor-

Mr. Carter's other revolutionary proposal -Three top Republicans here last week supuniversal and quick voter registration - would Only 53.3 percent of those voting age voted in

A CBS-New York Times survey of nonvoters has indicated that Mr. Carter had a 17-point lead over Mr. Ford among those who did not vote in November

Other surveys indicate that lower-income, less-educated voters tend to vote Democratic.

Many state voter restrictions seem calculated to limit the size of the electorate. The In 1969, then minority Leader Rep. Gerald chief argument against quick registration is vance trips to the town hall to register, he told

The White House is delighted at the Barkertration reform law" passed the Senate but was his statement on the floor, September 16, 1969: defeated in the House by seven votes. Republicans then overwhelmingly opposed it.

Republican legislative leadership support in couraged by the near victory over Mr. Carter in 1976. The actual Republican vote is far It seems likely that Congress will enact one higher than the theoretical Republican support or both of the Carter proposals, particularly if indicated by party preference surveys, it is

Carter wants more radio watts to carry rights message

By Clayton Jones Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

President Carter's latest extension of his campaign for universal respect of human rights may escalate a war of watts on world

The President is requesting funds to boost the radio signals of the Voice of America, Radio Free Europe, and Radio Liberty, America's three international broadcasters.

Mr. Carter specifically wants to beam stronger radio signals to southern Africa, the Ranks of missionaries still marching onward

By Tracy Early Special to The Christian Science Monitor

New York Some Americans may think the era of mis-

A recent survey shows that Protestant agencies in the United States and Canada increased their number of foreign missionaries from 35,070 at the beginning of 1973 to 36,950 at the

The 1973 figure also represented an increase, though smaller, over three years earlier. .

W.

These statistics come from the "Capital Mission Handbook," a publication issued every test the human-rights portion of the Helsinki of Mormon missionaries serving their two-year lowing no interference in internal alfairs, and terms abroad and certain other smaller soviet officials have criticized the broadcasts

Soviet Union, and the People's Republic of China, carrying official U.S. policy to many more millions of listeners. He asked Congress Washington March 22 for 28 additional 250-kilowatt radio

At present, Radio Liberty broadcasts aimed at the Soviet Union and most Radio Free Europe transmissions that hit Eastern Europe are jammed heavily, Mr. Carter said.

Voice of America, with 72 transmitters worldwide, is jammed only in its Mandarin Chinese broadcasts.

But, worse than jamming, America's oncepowerful broadcasts now are barely audible in many parts of the world because of escalating competition on the shortwave radio bands from other nations. (In Voice broadcasts, America ranks sixth in number of hours each week and 15th in number of languages broadcast.)

Thus, Mr. Carter's proposal for transmitters would crowd the airwaves even more but replace many aging U.S. transmitters.

"Albania broadcasts louder to South Amersionaries is past, or on its way out - but the | ica than the Voice," says a Voice of America news official

Mr. Carter is also expected to decide in April whether to shuffle the United States Information Agency to give the Voice of America more independence and thus more credibility on world airwaves. A 1976 Carter campaign statement said the Voice was "entangled in a web of political restrictions."

The boost in transmitters, if passed, will also three years by World Vision International of accord, which called for "freer and wider dissemination of information of all kinds." The Not included in its figures are the thousands Soviet Union has interpreted the accord as alof the three U.S. agencies more than usual.

By a staff plots

An immigrant's first look at the new world

Ellis Island monument planned Where the melting pot began

By Ward Morehouse III Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Ellis Island is America . . . and it needs Park Service supervisor of Ellis Island Ther

by the gabled, red-brick "great hall" - where ditional funds [for restoration]," he says 12 million Poles, Irish, Jews, and others first touched American soil — is in shambles.

may soon come to the rescue of this "gateway tion committee's goals.

it is falling down - that's the whole tragedy," immigrants - "huddled masses yearing!" says August C. Bolino, chairman of the Wash- free" as the poem by Emma Lazare ington, D.C., chapter of the Restore Ellis Is. scribes them - pussed through the Great land Committee (REIC). "More than half the of Ellis Island. people in the United States are descended from Harry McManamy, captain aboard a little of the Company of the Co people that came through Ellis Island."

Catholic University of America in Washington, the 1930s whon he "used to bring them to will soon announce a fund drive for a $70 million restoration of the island. "All I want is $1 McManamy reminisces: "It was sufficient and the control of the island." each [from each relative]," Mr. Bolino says. They were holding little bables ... Last May 29, the National Park Service vering at night."

It will again open this season on May It b ever, only 5 percent of the island can be see New York for safety reasons, according to Dad Ma is no way the rest of the island collons to The 27-acre island in New York Bay, topped the public without a substantial among of the

In the next few weeks Mr. Bollow will sent But millions of relatives of these immigrants

America to drum up support for the refer

"It's the greatest American monument, and Between 1892 and 1954 more than 13 m

Service boat which docks at the nearly $12 Mr. Bolino, a professor of economics at of Liberty, says he remembers day in the American connoisseurs buy direct and save 50% on Fine English Bone China

Our direct mail order service offers the highest standards of quality at astonishingly low costs. Please write for our (alrmailed) color brochure - coat $1 Leather & Smook
187 Piocadilly, London W1, Erigland

BOOK§ BOOKS

We supply books to any quantity subject to any quantity, to an inter-availability, to an international clientels both private and international clientels both private and international clientels. We supply tional

May we serve foll Enquirles to

A. BROWN & SONS Dept. LT/MA/17 24-28 George St. Hull, N. Humbersids England, HU1 340

Washington to pay UNESCO back dues

Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

United Nations, New York President Carter has been urging the U.S. ongress to bury the hatchet used to chop off A American contributions to UNESCO, the Inited Nations Educational, Scientific, and ultural Organization.

But it now appears that Congress is ready mly to put the hatchet aside - within easy 1967). The 1976 general conference reaffirmed

This cautious American approach is expected to alleviate UNESCO's financial crisis. But It does not wholly solve it. Nor does it fisally end the bitter dispute over the alleged politicization" of UNESCO. Within the past few weeks both Senate and House appropriations committees have voted to pay UNESCO the U.S. contributions for 1975 and 1976 - but not for 1977 as requested by in the "European Group." President Carter and urged by the State De-In effect, Congress is saying:

We'll pay our arrears, recognizing that

Froilan lives in the highlands of Guatemala

in a one-room but with dirt floors and no santary facilities. Labor there is so cheap and long hours still mean a life of poverty.

like the family who sponsors Froilan.

share something very special.

But now life is changing for Froilan.

that, for men like Froilan's father, hard work onto our $27 million for 1977 in the hope that UNESCO will continue to purge itself of what we consider excessive politicizing.

Congress originally cut off the funds to UNESCO in response to three decisions taken by the 1974 general conference in Paris:

 The first 1974 decision was to withhold UNESCO aid to Israel until it respected previous UNESCO demands to stop archaeological digs in East Jerusalem (seized from Jordan in this stance. Since then, at least the most controversial of the Israeli excavations has quietly come to an end.

• The second 1974 decision was not to include Israel in one of UNESCO's regional groups. The 1976 conference, however, in effect reversed this by allowing each group to vote upon its own membership -- enabling Israel to be invited to join the U.S. and Canada

 The third 1974 decision was a resolution condemning Israell educational policies in the Arab territories occupied by Israel since 1967. The 1976 conference repeated this con-INESCO has made progress - but we'll hang demnation. But Israel now has accepted the

Her name? We don't know. We found her become of this little girl? No one knows.

In her country, she's just one of thousands wandering the streets of a large city in South America. Her mother is a beggar. What will Read this and act.

The world is full of children like these who desperately need someone to care,

It costs them $15 a month, and it gives Froilan so very much. Now he eats reg-

Since 1938 the Christian Children's Fund has helped hundreds of thousands of children. But so many more need your help. Become a sponsor. You needn't send any money now—you can "meet" the child assigned to your care first. Just fill out and mail the coupon. You'll receive the child's photograph, background information, and detailed instructions on how to write to the child. If you wish to sponsor the child, simply send in your first monthly check or money order for $15 within 10 days. If not, return the

Take this opportunity to "meet" a child who needs your help. Somewhere in the world, there's a suffering child who will share something very special with you. Love,

For the love of a hungry child.

Please send my information package today.

I want to learn more about the child assigned to me. If I accept the child, I'll send my first sponsorship payment of $15 within 10 days. Or I'll return the photograph and other material so you can ask someone else to help.

I prefer to send my first payment now, and I enclose my first monthly payment of $15.

ember of International Union for Child Welfare, Geneva. Gifts are tax deductible. anadians: Write 1407 Yonge, Toronto, 7. Statement of income and expenses

Christian Children's Fund, Inc.

photo and other materials so we may ask someone else to help.

cannot sponsor a child now but would like to contribute $

Dr. Verent J. Mills
CHRISTIAN CHILDREN'S FUND, Inc., Box 26511, Richmond, Va. 23261
Choose any child who needs help.

ularly. He goes to school. Froilan writes to his sponsors and they write to him. They its May 17 elections are over.

Two further complications have been added. compromise. One is a Western "plus" - the shelving by the 1976 conference of a Soviet-backed declaration on the mass media which was widely interpreted as calling for government controls.

Organizations to either cut off its Talwanese rich Arab states. affiliate or be excluded from a UNESCO conference on environmental education.

functions of combatting illiteracy, preserving perhaps to cut programs. culture, and promoting scientific research. The expected payment of American arrears.

(shelving of the proposal for government con- against the United States and Israel, idea of a UNESCO mission to the area, once trol of mass media and Israeli entry into the European Group). Hence the congressional Within another week or so, a Senate-House conference committee is expected to reconcile the Senate's proposed $43 million appropriation with the House's $39 million.

An American payment on this sort of scale The other complication is a Western would enable UNESCO director-general Am-"minus" — acceptance of China's customary adou Mahtar M'Bow to repay loans now totaldemand that nongovernmental organizations ing $38 million which he has scraped together sever all ties with Taiwan. This has forced the to keep the organization affoat. About $24 mil-London-based World Federation of Engineering lion of this is in interest-free loans from oil-

The expected American payment comes at the 11th hour. UNESCO's 45-member executive UNESCO's supporters say that by vigorous board meets in Paris April 25 to May 13. Withdiplomacy the U.S. has dissolved the 1974 at- out a U.S. contribution it would probably have mosphere of rancorous confrontation, and that been compelled to call an extraordinary sesreal progress has been made in getting sion of the full general conference to work out UNESCO back to its thoroughly worthwhile ways of meeting the financial emergency and

UNESCO's critics describe it as taking three even without the 1977 payment also due, should steps backward (the two Israeli resolutions obviate any such session, one which would and Taiwan) for every two steps forward probably have turned into a bitter onslaught

Baby-selling to be outlawed By Peter C. Stuart

Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

or best offer."

- an estimated 5,000 a year. Now, Congress may take definitive steps to pregnant women. halt this human auction.

A House of Representatives subcommittee is per child. by outlawing the arranging of adoptions for profits is the broker." profit. Earlier, a Senate subcommittee, under The child is treated as a chattel, the natural the chairmanship of Walter F. Mondale (D) of mother is exploited financially and emo-Minnesota - now Vice-President - beld infor- tionally, and the adoptive parents acquire a mational hearings on the matter.

lute void in federal law," says the bill's spon- committee was told. sor, Rep. Henry J. Hyde (R) of Illinois, in an "We are not dealing with the sale of goods dictments are stalled by jurisdictional chal- ganization. lenges, while action against one alleged source that country's authorities.

The problem has grown in the 1970s. Until as five years in prison. then, children for adoption were readily available. But the situation has changed - spawned by swiftly changing American social attitudes.

A new acceptance of adoption and the relaxing acceptance of birth control, abortions, and ings on the West Coast.

unwed mothers is shrinking the traditional sup ply of infants offered for adoption.

These pressures are making adoptable chil-Washington dren - particularly healthy, white infants - in "For sale: babies in good condition, $25,000 the words of Representative Hyde, "a hot commodity."

The add is fictitious, but the transactions The subcommittee was told by prosecutors and social-agency officials that impatient adop-A growing demand from Americans wishing tion applicants who can afford it are turning to to adopt children and a dwindling supply of black-market "brokers" - ranging from rackwhite infants is generating what is proving to eteers to seemingly respectable doctors and be a thriving black market in illegal adoptions, lawyers - who bargain for the offspring of young, usually single, and often frightened

The going price is $10,000, $15,000, or $25,000

holding hearings on (and refining) legislation "Victimization just goes across the board," which would fill a yawning gap in federal law says Congressman Hyde. "The only one who child about whom they know virtually nothing "We've shown there is a problem - an abso- and who may be unsuited for them, the suband services, but the sale of human life - and This legal "void" permits baby-selling to it is not only the child who suffers," testified flourish in interstate and international traffic. Judith Fink, vice-president of American Citithe hearings have disclosed. Some state in zens Concerned for Life, a family welfare or-

The Hyde bill would make interstate or inof "imported" babies, Mexico, has been left to ternational baby selling a federal crime, punishable by a fine up to $10,000 and-or as much

No opposition has yet surfaced, but proponents are still seeking the active support of the Department of Justice.

ing of qualifications for adoptive parents are The Criminal Justice Subcommittee of the swelling the market for bables, while the grow- House Judiciary Committee plans further hear-

The BIBLE LANDS and $1349⁰⁰ ITS PEOPLE with

For reservations and information contact Caroline E. Thayer, Tour Manager P.O. Box 465, 1308 Bradbourne Ave., Duarte, CA 91010 (213) 358-7218 Travel Arrangements by Wholesele Tours International, Inc., New York, NY 10018

JIM & ANN METZGER 16 DAYS BY SEA, AIR AND LAND departing New York on June 8, 1977

By James Nelson Goodsell

Latin America correspondent of

The Christian Science Monitor

The overlapping fishing jurisdictions is only one of these issues and perhaps the easiest to resolve. General practice in disputes of this sort is to draw a line of demarcation roughly midway between the coasts of the two nations.

It will not be as easy to resolve other issues:

a resumption of the loose antihtjacking accord

which Cuban President Fidel Castro abrogated

last year; the resumption of trade between Cuba and the U.S.; compensation for selzed

U.S. property in Cuba; the future of the U.S.

Guaniánamo naval base on Cuba's south coast landing rights in each other's country.

of Foreign Affairs.

later this year.

publicity during the sessions.

and dozens of long-lapsed accords such as air

But these knottier issues are on the agenda and some are likely to be part of the current talks now under way in New York between delegations headed by the U.S.'s Terence A. Tod-

man and Cuba's Pelegrin Torres. Mr. Todman is Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-Amer-Ican Affairs and Dr. Torres is Deputy Minister

The talks began secretly in mid March and came to light a week later. The exact location in New York has not been disclosed, presumably because neither side wants the glare of

But informed sources on both sides indicated

last week that the talks were simply a curtain raiser to more substantive negotiations

The New York talks are being held against the background of Washington's continuing uneasiness over Cuba's intentions in Africa.

Cuban troops are stationed not only in Angola, where there are between 10,000 and 13,000, but

DURBAN

FURNISHERS

(PIY) LTD

Buyers and Sellers of

New, Used and

Antique Furniture

∰?

Corner of

Smith and Park Streets

Durban

31-1941/2/3

also in 10 other African countries.

STANLEY'S

REAL ESTATE

Property Specialists in

Offices |

11 Broadway

Durban North

LA LUCIA

derail the talks.

Behind-the-scenes maneuvering

How will coup try affect Thai prestige?

Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Will the military-backed government of Thailand draw new confidence - and altract stepped-up investment from overseas - in the wake of the abortive coup March 26?

The unsuccessful effort by a group of generals, backed by 300 troops, reemphasized the behind-the-scenes maneuvering for power that has overshadowed efforts to build confidence in the new government, which itself was brought in by military

A follow-up coup attempt had long been predicted.

Many observers stressed the unstable nature of the broad military coalition behind the current civilian Prime Minister, Thanin Kraivichien. Economic sources said concern about another coup was one reason the new government was having difficulty attracting foreign investment.

Indeed, the government showed its sensitivity to such predictions a few weeks ago when it expelled a correspondent for Half for A-plant the Far Eastern Economic Review, Norman Peagam, on grounds that his reporting of the possibilities of another coup

There have long been signs that the new government has been acutely aware of the danger of another challenge from discontented elements in the military. Some sources maintain that those who staged the October coup did so to pre-empt yet another coup attempt by persons even further to the political right than themselves. Reportedly these included Gen. Chalard Hiranyasiri, who has been named as a leader in the March 26

General Chalard was dismissed as No. 2 man in the Army last October and became a Buddhist monk at the royal monas-

But, by the government's account, he left the monastery to lead this abortive coup.

The Thai government has announced that five leaders of the coup, including General Chalard, have been allowed to leave the country in return for the freeing of two high-ranking military officers held hostage. According to the government, Gen-

THE FAMOUS FRIENDLY FAMILY STORE

CAPE TOWN

JOHANNESBURG

PRETORIA

PORT ELIZABETH

EAST LONDON

ROUTH AFRICA ME

advertisers apprecialeyou

FOR

FASHION

FAVOURITES

imported or local for all occasions

in our Showroom

and new SPORTIQUE

lilian salmon

Fountain Shopping Centre 85 Main Road, Rondeboach South Airica

Phone 66513

MONITOR

A perfect ensemble

ITIC

ALL ON HAND

GRAND!

GRAND BAZAARS

PARON, BELLVILLE, COODMOOD, PANEL STA POINT WINDERS CLARINONT, MAINLAND, D'UR BAR ROAD (BELLVILLE), LLSIES RYER GAROENS. EPRING CAPE TOWN SMUTH AFRICA.

at the Security Operations Command Building in Bangkok until their monastery in February of former Prime Minister Thanon & flight out of the country was cleared. About 300 soldiers from a tikachorn. Both men had fled Thatland after a student regularity military base in Kanchanaburi Province, 65 miles west of the that helped topple their government in 1973 city, were said to have moved into Bangkok before dawn to take control of the Radio Thailand broadcasting station and the two men has stimulated political maneuverings within the three military installations. But within hours most of the rebels had surrendered to government troops.

Still to be answered is how these events affect the current balance of power among Thailand's military leaders - and their willingness to continue supporting Prime Minister Tha-

These questions had already been emphasized by two ports that the five men were in detention in Bangkok after Tail events: the return to Thailand last January of former Deputy eral Chalard and about 25 others had held out at the Internal Prime Minister Praphas Charusathien; and the leaving of Some sources have reported signs that the reemergence > military coalition. (Reuter reported from Bangkok that my tery surrounded the whereabouts of the leaders of the abortic (The government had said that General Chalard [a forms deputy Army chief and commander of the Thai troops the fought in Vietnam] and four other coup leaders had beet allowed to leave the country.

But official comment was not available on newspaper n wan, their announced destination, refused to accept them.)

projects, but . . .

Tokyo Half of the Japanese population supports further development of nuclear power plants in Japan, but at the same time 45 percent oppose construction of a plant in their neighborhoods, accord-further developed, 15 percent favored an end to nuclear development, and 35 percent expressed no opinion.

ing to a government survey. Assets exceed The public opinion poll showed 50 percent of the 3,972 R750 000 000 people asked said they preferred to see nuclear power of our hand

In the palm

Branches throughout the Republic of South Africa

ALLIED

Building Society

The Building

Society closest to you

WE SAVE YOU MORE ON YOUR OVERALL MONTHLY GROCERY BILL!

all the services you'll ever need!

and nobody gives you better service than.

(C) THE CAPE OF GOOD HOPE SAVINGS BANK

HENSHILWOODS

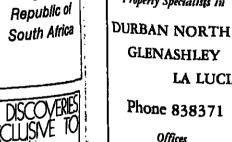

THE FAMILY STORE FAMILY REQUIREMENTS Clothing, Piece Goods, Haberdashery, Sports Goods
Household Goods, Garden Shed, Gifts, Novelties

Meet Your Friends for Lunch or Test at

"The Town Square" Restaurant
In HENSHILWOODS of CLAREMONT Phone 6.8511 or 65.4040 Cape Province - South Africa

Branches

SECTS sond or QUAL

Cuba, U.S. talks: more than fish on conference table come up in talks in New York. But despite the official U.S. concern, the issue is not likely to

Indeed, Washington is trying to play down Behind the current Cuba-United States talks the speculation of Cuban involvement in the on overlapping fishing jurisdictions is a mutual shadowy invasion of Zalre by Katangan rebels. determination to end 18 years of friction and Cuba denies involvement, and Washington says Both Cuba and the U.S. appear ready, in ef. it has no evidence of a Cuban presence in fect, to bury their hatchets - and engage in Zaire, sidestepping the question of whether Cumeaningful talks over a wide range of issues. bans helped train the rebels.

Obviously, Washington despite qualms does not want to upset the current talks.

There are other indications of this attitude: A South Dakota basketball team just flew to Cuba for exhibition competition with Cuba's all-star basketball team. Some observers are hailing the competition as the Cuban-U.S. version of the Chinese-U.S. "ping- ready are engaged in serious negotiations. The Peking-Washington relations.

idea languished.

basketball team's visit beginning April 4.

Cuba-U.S. sports and cultural exchanges, but comparisons with "ping-pong diplomacy" appear overdrawn since the U.S. and Cuba alpong diplomacy" that preceded the opening of basketball match morely adds fuel to a current warming trend.

Latin America

Cuba's President Castro had invited the New • The Carter administration recently lifted York Yankees to play exhibition baseball in the ban on the spending of dollars by U.S. vis-Cuba before the start of the major league sea- itors to Cuba. The action adds new dimension son in the U.S., but baseball commissioner to the earlier order removing all restrictions to Bowie Kuhn countered with a proposal that an travel by U.S. citizens to Cuba. It will not necall-star U.S. team go to the Caribbean Island. essarily increase the number of such visitors The Cubans preferred the Yankees - and the since they must obtain visas from Cuba and these are often slow in coming.

Into the breach came South Dakota Son. Meanwhile, Cyrus Eaton Jr., son of the U.S. James Abourezk who arranged his home state industrialist, announced the start of negotiations between Cuba and his company, Tower The basketball competition is bound to spur International, Ltd., a Canadian firm. for con-

A look at Argentina without Isabel

Military regime gains on massive problems

By James Nelson Goodsett Latin America correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

It was a year ago that Argentina's military deposed South America's first woman president and inherited control of a politically and economically bankrupt nation seriously torn apart by urban and rural terrorism.

Now, after a sometimes turbulent year in office, the generals and admirals running the

 Brought inflation down from 54 percent a month to a still too-high figure of 10 percent a month, checked the 15 percent annual decline in the gross national product with a forecast 4.5 percent growth rate for 1977, and completely turned around the balance-of-payments deficit with a $1.2 billion surplus at the end of

 Made significant inroads on terrorism by a heavyhanded military-police effort that has largely eliminated the leadership of both the

NEIL & CO.

Hairstyling

for the Appointments

Phone 62713/4

⇔REDKEN

AEMBER HAIR RESEARCH DIVISION

FIRST FLOOR

CHALLENOR'S BUILDING

26 FIELD STREET, DURBAN

Discriminating

Ejército Revolucionario del Pueblo and the Two weeks ago, both Amnesty International, Montoneros, the two leading guerrilla groups, an international rights' organization, and Ardecimated ranks of the both groups, and re-gentina's Permanent Assembly for Human duced both to carrying out fewer, but still tron-Rights, issued reports sharply critical of the blesome and spectacular, acts of violence such Videla government. as bomb blasts in military offices.

The price for these achievements has been people are being held as political prisoners and heavy. For the average Argentine wage-car- that torture and summary executions are widecrease restraints and he has little more than March 24, 1976, coup that brought the military promises of a brighter future. That better day to power. may yet come, but he doesn't see it in his pay

And for all Argentines, the touch antiquerrilla stance of the military has led to a serious The coup had a good deal of begrudging superosion of human rights. The military, insisting port from Argentines of many political stripes. abuses of rights in the crackdown on the ter- argued persuasively for a inflitury takeover. rorists, but suggests they are necessary

Gen. Jorge Rafa*e*l Videla.

ner, the evident economic turnaround has not spread under Argentina's "state of siege." It been a boon. He faces staggering decline in his also claimed that between 2,000 and 5,000 Arpurchasing power because of still wage in- gentines have disappeared in the wake of the

Amnesty International said 5,000 to 6,000

That coup ended María Estela Martínez de Perón's 20 months as Argentina's and Latin America's first woman president.

that the terrorists were the real violators of The political chaos and economic decline that human rights, admits that there have been grew rapidly during Mrs. Peron's presidency

But this support is not as strong today as it All this has provoked a wide-ranging world- was a year ago. Indeed, the "honeymoon is wide condemnation of the military headed by over," as a top Argentine official recently ad-

Human rights dispute grows

By James Nelson Goodself Latin America Correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor All of a sudden, President Carter is embroiled in his first Latin American crisis.

The issue: human rights. Governments in half a dozen countries have reacted vigorously to the Carter administration's policy of linking military aid with calls for observance of human rights. Military assistance to two countries, Argentina and Uruguay, was cut off because of alleged rights violations. Those two, and others, rejected outright all United States aid, economic as well as military. Brazil has joined in, refusing a $50 million military-aid grant and announcing it will contact other nations for such assistance.

Ironically, the flap over military aid to Brazil results not from Mr. Carter's own strong stance on the human rights' issue but rather a rights everywhere.

legislative requirement enacted by Congress ten months ago, long before Mr. Carter became President. Under the current Foreign Assistance Act, which President Ford signed June 30, 1976, the Department of State must submit to Congress a report on human rights in each of the 80 or so countries receiving U.S. aid.

It was that portion of the report dealing with Brazil, passed along as a "diplomatic courtesy" to Brazilian officials by the U.S. Embassy in Brasilia, that prompted the Brazilian rejection of U.S. military help.

The administration says it was prepared for the storm of protest, and while U.S. officials explain the law under which the human rights' report is written, they are making clear also that President Carter feels strongly on the issue. They are telling hemisphere leaders he is committed to a staunch advocacy of human

IT'S A PLEASURE TO SHOP AT REENACRES DURBAN'S LEADING STORE

FOR YOUR SHOPPING CONVENIENCE OPEN A CREDIT ACCOUNT TODAY!

WEST STREET . DURBAN . SOUTH AFRICA

in fashion are to be found

West Street, Durban and branches throughout Natal

The best and most exciting trends

Soviet Union

Vance and Brezhnev on arms:

What they say and what they mean

By Daniel Southerland and David K. Willis Staff correspondents of The Christian Science Monitor opened here under a gray and rainy Moscow nologically (as it did by developing the MIRV, sky, the United States was trying to focus at- the cluster of separately-targeted warheads tention on the need to stop improving the qual- which sit on top of rocket launchers). ity of strategic arms as well as to limit their framework for a new strategic arms agree- missile also - the product of skillful minment (SALT II) which limits numbers, the way laturization and advanced techniques in which could still be open for continued growth in the the Americans are up to 10 years ahead, and destructive power of those that remain.

Hence the Carter effort to convince Soviet racy, and vast range. leaders that both quality and numbers need to be tackled together, according to sources here.

for the moment. The Sovict approach has been a conservative one. It has concentrated on numbers. It leaves to try to thwart U.S. MIRVs. These include the aside explicit talks on limiting quality until

The American hope is that U.S. superiority in technology can act as leverage on the Soviet

Both sides opened the crucial talks March 28 by restating their known positions on strategic could extend for many miles, or from a pad arms. The atmosphere was apparently blunt and straightforward. U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance later described the mood as "businesslike."

The official Soviet news agency Tass adopted a cool tone, calling the talks "a conversation" without any of the usual descriptive phrases. Omission of the phrases, analysts said, indicated tension.

One diplomat said: "It's too soon to tell." He nodded when asked if the tone of the talks was blunt. Both sides appeared to be stating their maximum bargaining positions first. Mr. Vance put forward a proposal for deep cuts in strategic arms plus limits on improving the quality of weapons.

The Soviets responded with their less ambitious January, 1976, proposal, which would include limits on American long-range cruise missiles. Mr. Vance said.

The Soviets do appear very worried by the As the first formal Carter-Kremlin dialogue proved American ability to leap ahead tech-

The Kremlin way of dealing with this kind of leap so far is to insist on numerical limits. It Even if the current talks succeed in setting a takes this approach on the American cruise which now allow hedge-hopping, super-accu-

But the Soviets have not so far appeared ready for a detailed discussion of agreeing to But Soviet watchers here expected the Carter thrust to meet with little success - at least are rushing so fast to produce their own MIRVs and other weapons.

The Soviets are developing mobile missiles SS-20 and the SS-16 (which is actually the 20 with an extra fuel stage bolted on to give intercontinental range).

And the Soviets also know that on U.S. drawing boards is the MX missile, designed to be launched from any point along a trench that covered by a shelter identical in appearance to a cluster of "dummy" shelters around it. Also planned is a new version of MIRV, known as MARV (maneuverable re-entry vehicle).

The U.S. side recognizes that Mr. Brezhnev may simply not be ready to discuss anything else but numbers here. The Soviets have said repeatedly that they want Mr. Carter and Mr. Vance to stick to the Viadivostok agreement. and leave other matters until later.

But American officials also hope by raising the issue of quality here, they can prod the Soviets into thinking about it earlier than they might otherwise.

Meanwhile, these appeared to be other key SALT issues that need to be resolved here: Whether the U.S. can get the Soviets to agree to reducing the 2,400 Vladivostok limit flight to Cuba. The Pentagon washing by offering in return some restrictions on the where it can be based and how has range of cruise missiles launched from subma- fueled in midair.

Jaunty Soviet Army men - but a blunter mood for Vance in Kee

in fact being carried in a bomber or in subma- becomes, the more important the becomes rine torpedo tubes, and whether the missiles comes as a backup or auxiliary vegbeing carried are long range or not. Surveil- with strategic potential. Hence the lance satellites so far used by both sides to limit the Backfire now. monitor the existing SALT I accord are unable to make such judgments, experts say. (U.S. cruise missiles are about two feet across and cruise. some 20 feet long, according to U.S. technical Deciding how much of a threat is posed by the Soviet Backfire bomber. The Soviets dis- deep cuts plus a curb on the quality week miss it as a medium-range aircrast for use against European or Chinese targets. The Pen-Vladivostok limits now, excluding (Next tagon says it could bomb the U.S. on a one-way Backfire.

Walkers

buttons . braids haberdashery

suppliers of lapidary findings

buy them at retail stores

SCAIVES

laces • ribbons

imitation jewellery

belts · hairgoods

Another U.S. argument heard his: How to verify whether a cruise missile is—the smaller the ceiling on stratego.

Mr. Carter has suggested leaving t fire off the current agenda as was

If the Soviets hold firm to their bugs position, then the U.S. will be level will? lection of both their main SALT paties - and also a "nyet" to its fallback posite

WE'LL ARRANGE EVERY JUST PACK YOUR BAG

Passports • Free Car Parking Professional Advice • Travel Insurance Credit Facilities

Grace Bros Travel

Black-owned houses: legal but not likely

By June Goodwin Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Johannesburg More housing for blacks - that was to be the dution which would diffuse South Africa's race crisis.

The argument went like this: If a man could own his own house, he would have something to protect and would not want a revolution.

the black township of Soweto, what has been done about housing for blacks? "The government, she is fooling the people," woman in this reporter's building.

Government policy on black housing has been so ill-defined that even people who should know what is happening - loan companies, our loan is secure." white employers who want to help blacks buy houses, black advice bureous - do not.

blacks are not allowed to own any land in the the blacks. ownships. Thus the government can at any time take away a black's house.

The government has backed down in past few years on several housing issues.

in 1968 blacks could only rent houses, not "own" houses on 30-year leases - but they had and is pushing for black freehold rights. to take out citizenship in tribal homelands. But many analysts think the government will

OUTSIDE INN

COFFEE

LOUNGE

OPEN MON.-FRI.

9 a.m.-5 p.m.

SAT. ONLY

9 a.m.-1:30 p.m.

South Yarra Arcade

105 Toorak Road

South Yarra

26.4806

Bookmarker Co.

OF AUSTRALASIA

uppliers of Reading Room

LESSON MARKERS

CRAYON HOLDERS

BOOK COVERS

REFILLS and ERASERS

Iso Books and Records of special interest to Christian Scientists

FOR FREE CATALOGUE WRITE TO:

walch these columns

49 Amber Grove, Mount Waverley Klona, Australia Tel. 277-4098

striction was dropped and the government said blacks could now own houses "in perpetuity." But the term "in perpetuity" has no legal standing as far as granting loans to blacks is concerned. No loan company would grant a loan to a black for a house owned "in perpetuity."

However, the Natal Building Society has granted a one million rand ($1,15 million) loan to the Bantu Administration Boards, which in Now, eight months after the rioting began in turn will loan money to the blacks.

This still leaves major drawbacks. Blacks distrust the administration boards and do not want to deal with them. And there is still no was a comment on the situation by a cleaning guarantee that the houses will not be taken away by the boards.

> K. H. Loney of the Natal Building Society said, "Unless the government goes bankrupt

But the Natal Building Society is criticized by others, who say that its approach will not At the crux of the matter is the fact that lead to freehold land and home ownership for Land ownership is critical, so much so that if the government does not grant ownership, the battle for diffusing the race crisis will likely be lost.

The Urban Foundation, a group of South Afbut them. Then in 1975 blacks were allowed to rica's most influential businessmen, knows this which were often far from the place where not grant blacks frechold rights for one simple they lived. In August, 1976, the citizenship re- reason. Freehold would remove a major brick

THE STREET STANDARD TO STAND

AND A SECRETARY OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PROPERT

MELBOURNE

CITY-CHADSTONE-NORTHLAND

South Africa

Black housing in Soweto — it can be 'bought,' but not the land under it from the structure of apartheid under which - The average number of persons living in a blacks are conceived to be only temporary la- Soweto house now is 17. The standard house is borers in white areas of South Africa.

Public housing director Mathys Wilsnach door tollet. of South Africa after World War II there was in Soweto. But these are occupied by renting an acute shun problem. At that time mining tenants, companies loaned the government six indition rand ($6.9 million) for a crash home building

Mr. Wilsnach says. "No similar concerted hope the government will act. One such is the effort now is required." But the township of Al- Soweto Home Improvement Action Group exandra is in his area and much of its consists (SHIAG). SHIAG has done four years of reof desperate slums.

ing lists for houses; some on the list for seven a pilot demonstration project. But the govern-

發腦膨胀膨脹膨胀膨脹膨胀

DRIVE-IN

PHONE 43 9174

LOCKLEYS, MARION, MODBURY

AND MORPHETT VALE

ADELAIDE

SOUTH AUSTRALIA

small, with three rooms, a kitchen, and an outsays that when blacks poured into urban areas. He says there are 50,000 houses for sale now

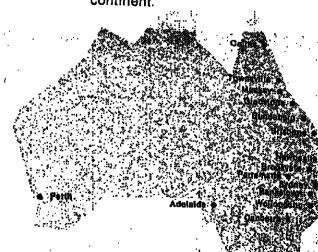

> This sort of contradiction has led many blacks to abandon hope of home ownership.

Still, there are groups of patient people who search into improving black homes and has In Soweto, over 20,000 families are on wait- come close to getting government approval for ment backs off.

in Australia, it's David Jones' . . . 25 stores across the continent

David Jones' is your store. Australia's store with 25 branches across the nation. Since 1838, we have extended our services as far north as Cairns, as far west as Perth. David Jones' are proud to be Australian, to serve customers all over the continent.

JONES

read the advertisements in The Christian Science Monitor

Serving the Australian family since the 1890's NOCK & KIRBY'S

Sydney and all branch stores READ&RESPOND to Monitor ads

Travellers Cheques . Health Docum

DRESSING GOWNS • BRUNCH COATS LINGERIE AND CORSETRY

We Specialise in Large Fittings 12 THE CENTREWAY, 259 COLLINS STREET

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA

Battery Electric HYSTER FORK LIFT TRUCKS NEW AND USED

2,000 LB. TO 80,000 LB. 551 2177 HYTECO PTY. LIMITED

Sadat wants 'lots of weapons' from the United States

Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Mixed military and political motives will impel Egyptian President Sadat to request U.S. arms when he visits Washington April 4, and many of them concern his Soviet-armed neighbor Libya as much as they do Israel, in the opinion of Mideast military experts.

Mr. Sadat told CBS News in an interview broadcast March 27 that he would ask U.S. President Carter for "lots" of Northrop F-5 fighter aircraft and TOW anti-tank missiles. The F-5 is a subsonic plane sold to Jordan, Saudl Arabia, and many other African and Asian states. It is no match in combat for sophisticated U.S. and home-manufactured IsTOW missiles have also been sold to several Arab countries as well as to Israel.

Sale of items like F-5's and TOWs would be regarded in Egypt and elsewhere as a political gesture proving the U.S. was interested in helping Egypt's armed forces recover from alleged neglect by its former Soviet suppliers, and could provide the first beginnings of a "retooling" of the Egyptian forces along U.S. lines. (Some 38 French Mirage 3 fighter-bombers and around 50 French and British helicopters have been delivered, and about 200 French Mirage F-1 fighter-bombers are on order from France or for co-production in Egypt.)

However, Mideast military experts believe there are many other items Mr. Sadat and his Defense Minister, Gen. Abdel Ghani al-Gammasy would like to try to purchase on easy byan leader Col. Muammar al-Qaddafi, Mr. Sadat's militant neighbor.

Though Egypt lacks petrodollars, Saudi Arabia has already financed arms purchases for Jordan and Syria and has put up the lion's share of more than $1 billion for the Arab Military Industrial Organization (AMIO), an Egypt-based arms industry employing French and British technology.

Egypt is already training air crews on the 10 Lockheed Hercules C-130 military transports authorized for sale by the U.S. Congress and Defense Department last year. But so far neither the Ford nor the Carter administrations are known to have authorized other military sales, despite several "window-shopping" trips to the U.S. by Egyptian military missions and the hopeful activity of some U.S. arms salesmen and consultants in Cairo.

Egypt's Soviet-supplied MIG-21 aircraft.

Several U.S. firms have shown interest in small-arms and ordnance supplies for Egypt and possibly in building plants for these or larger units in the country.

For several months, Israeli sources have been telling Western newsmen that Soviet supplies, despite Mr. Sadat's protests to the contrary, have been flowing regularly to Egypt's armed forces since 1975. The Israelis say these include new MIG-21 fighters and about 50 new MIG-23s, anti-aircraft missiles, new T-62 tanks, and tank engines as well as other spare parts. The same Israeli reports contradict Western sources who say Soviet arms supplies to Syria have all but halted and that the Syrian port of Tartous is no longer available to Soviet naval tually making increasing use of Tartous though raeli planes like the F-14 or the Kflr C-2, but credit terms from the U.S. - if President Car-The Israeli reports say the Soviets are ac-Muzorewa: five-point plan to 'complete liberation struggle' would be useful in a ground-support role in ter approves - to confront the Soviet-supplied One example was reported talks last year with the U.S. firm of Litton Industries for fit- they are not using Latakia, Syria's main port. desert warfare with an adversary like Libya. arsenal being bought with petrodollars by Li-Smith must hand over power. Following the participate in the referendum. precedent set by the Pearce commission in "Facilities must be provided for units." 1972 [when a British team led by Lord Pearce guerrillas, whorever they may be her assessed African reaction to settlement pro- them to take part. "As soon as possible thereafter, let, posals agreed to between the British and Rhodesian Governments] Britain must organize Government convenes a full constitutive the exercise and ensure that there is free polit- ference to work out and finalize links) the independence constitution."

Wellington

Wellington

FARMERS Friendly family FERGUSON & OSBORN Where satisfaction is guaranteed

BOOKSELLERS STATIONERS

FOR VALUE: LOOK FOR THE WYNDHAM LABEL ON FARMERS' EXCLUSIVES ...

> CUBA STREET, WELLINGTON JACKSON STREET, PETONE HIGH STREET, LOWER HUTT MAIN ROAD, UPPER HUTT COASTLANDS, PARAPARAUMU OUEEN STREET, MASTERTON

Conwells

PRINTERS

and

BOOKBINDERS

ipecialists in Colour Printing

202 LAMBTON QUAY WELLINGTON

DRY CLEANERS

152 Vivjan St.

SERVICE Phone 846556

MONITOR

Wellington

When in Wellington it's -

"MEET ME AT JAMES SMITH'S CORNER" the corner of Wellington's busy Cuba and Manners Streets. Spend half a day there.

enjoy a pleasant morning or afternoon tea or maybe a scrumptious, midday steak. And for "take-home" meats, pastries and salads etc., there's nothing to equal the famous "Hertnons" in James Smith's. Pamper yourself to a special treatment in the City's only Elizabeth Arden beauty salon or visit our exclusive Starlight Hairdressing

Browse around the City's largest fashion floor in air-conditioned comfort or preview

Explore our international Cosmetic lane featuring specialty shops for all the famous brands including Estee Lauder. Take a tour of the furnishing floor or take a peep at Wellington's only Rosenthal collection in our China department. If your interest lies in Tapestry Embroidary or rug making, stop by Nancy's, the only department of its kind in Wellington. Yes! You'll find everything you'd ever want in the big store on the Corner of Cuba and Manners Streets (Also at Porirua, Johnsonville, Paraparaumu, Levin and Upper our fashion Boutique exclusive.

Agencies at: -196 A Lambton Quay 41 Willis St. 23 Manners St. 10 Elizabeth St. 64 Kilbirnie Crescent

RE4D

RESPOND

Property Auctioners Valuers Residential & Commercial Real Estate

For Brimpi Rivional With offices Governod the Whole of the Wellington district at your service.

S. George NATHAN & CO. LTD.

Phone 729.319

Processing units and Depots throughout Wellington, Hutt Valley and West coast

P. H. Jauncey

Studios

PHOTOGRAPHERS

Portraiture

Weddings

Colour

50 WILLIS ST.

WELLINGTON

PHONE 737-582

New hurdles for Smith's internal settlement

By Michael Holman Special to The Christian Science Monitor

Sallsbury, Rhodesia In what may mark a serious setback to attempts to bring about a settlement between Rhodesia's governing minority of 270,000 whites and the country's 6.4 million blacks, Prime Minister Ian Smith and African National Council (ANC) leader Bishop Abel Muzorewa now appear sharply divided over the purpose of a referendum to establish a majority leader.

Bishop Muzorewa, generally regarded as the most popular and most moderate of nútionalist leaders, set out a five-point plan "to complete the liberation struggle of Zimbabwe" (the name African nationalists give to Rhodesia). It opens with a call for Mr. Smith to "cat- be as serious as it appears, it will prejudice egorically and unequivocally surrender political power and authority to the black majority immediately" following a referendum.

But answering questions at an airport press conference before leaving on a South African and Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny. to have talks with South African Premier John 24 after an eight-week tour of Europe and Af-Vorster and British Foreign Secretary David rica, told a 5,000-strong ANC National Con-Owen, Mr. Smith described a referendum on sultative Assembly meeting in a Salisbury footthat basis as a "non-starter."

The only hopeful note was that Mr. Smith Mr. Smith's sincerity about majority rule is added that his government is "sympathetic" to that he hand over power to the majority an exercise that would produce the leader of through the exercise of one man, one vote."

agreement between the two essential parties to any settlement comes shortly before Dr. Owen is due to visit southern Africa for talks about the Rhodesian dispute with African "frontline" presidents, South African Premier John Vorster, and possibly Mr. Smith himself.

The referendum suggestion was first proposed by Bishop Muzorewa at the unsuccessful Geneva conference on Rhodesia last year as a method of ensuring a representative interim government prior to a majority rule. It has since been seen as an integral part of renewed Western efforts to bring Mr. Smith and black leaders back to the conference table.

Should the conflict between Mr. Smith's and the bishop's interpretations of the referendum the success of Dr. Owen's visit. All this takes place against the background of intense Soviet interest in the problem, marked by the current visits to Africa of Cuban leader Fidel Castro ball stadium March 27 that "the only proof of ical activity throughout the country. "All persons in political detention, and in so- "Failure to carry out this plan when called 'protected villages' (into which more continued and unabating bloodshet," in: than 250,000 tribe members have been moved that has cost more than 4,000 live 25 in an effort to isolate them from nationalist cember, 1972, the bishop told the assets The bishop went on to call for: "A national referendum to elect a leader to whom Mr. guerrillas] must be released and allower

Educating South African whites on racial issues

By June Goodwin Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

More people here are perceiving the urgent need to educate white South Africans to black/white issues. For - many whites are arguing - unless whites can see the problems they face, they will not move to solve them. The South African Institute of Race Relations is to launch a program soon that promises to be one of the best recent attempts by whites to take an honest look at their society. The institute plans to make four or five short films illustrating aspects of South Africa's race problems. It hopes the films may be run on television, which is government controlled, as well as being used at symposia and seminars.

In addition, the institute aims to bring together groups of "Whites do not know the grievances of the black," said Fred Van Wyk, director of the institute. "Ideally, it should be a black person who tells them," he added.

More pamphlets in prospect

The institute also wants to increase its publication of pamphlets about such things as how to get a lawyer, the perils of buying on credit, how to understand domestic (servants). "There is such a demand for these," Mr. Van Wyk sald.

He estimates that each film will cost about $20,000, "We could do with 500,000 rand [about $500,000] for this scheme,"

The Institute of Race Relations, which has a deeper understanding of and more genuine contacts with blacks than do many organizations here, receives financial help from the Ford and Rockefeller Foundations. But this project, which was suggested by Durban's Anglican Archbishop Denis E. Hurley,

The climate is ripe for educating whites, as the demands on the time and knowledge of the institute's secretary for the Transvaal region, Ina Perlman, indicate.

Requests pour in

Mrs. Periman has been bombarded with requests for information and guidance from white groups such as the Urban Foundation and the Women for Peace. These groups have been formed because of the confusion raised in white thinking by the riots in black townships last year. The institute, in contrast, has existed for 46 years.

Mrs. Periman humbly down-plays her knowledge of what is happening in black communities. But she is one of the most informed whites in Johannesburg,

The institute's education project for whites is a positive drop in a very big bucket of ignorance across the color line.

HASTINGS

GRIFFITHS FOOTWEAR LTD.

HASTINGS

HAWKES BAY

FARMERS

CO-OP ASSN. LTD.

DEPARTMENTAL

STORES

LAND and ESTATE

AGENTS

REAL ESTATE

ALL MAIN CENTRES

Napier, Hastings, Wairoa Walpukurau, Dannevirke and Gisborne

Heretaunga Street W.

Next Bank of N.Z.

BEAUTIFUL

Specialists

in Shoes for

All the Family

For the Entire Family Choose From Our Quality Selection Alterations On Premises

Blackmore's

HERETAUNGA STREET HASTINGS, N.Z. TELEPHONE 84142

ADS make your shopping easier

Wellington

ANZ Bank Interest Earning Deposits

Rates of Interest payable on deposits up to $12,00

	30 days	5.00%pa
	6 months	5.50%pa
	12 months	8.50% թ.
	24 months	7.00%pa
	3 years	8.00%p#
•	4 years	8.50%ps
	5 years and over	9.00% pa
	Rates are as at 17 9.76 and are subject	to Hucluston

We will offer you a rate of interest for: terms other than those stated above -deposits over $12,000

Interest earned on your ANZ Interest Earning dep qualifies for a Tax Exemption of up to $100.

ANZ BANK Ready to listen - Ready to help

$ Latest Fashion Arrivals for Women, Men. Chil

* Everything for the Home!

EASIEST, MOST CONVENIENT CREDIT SYSTEMS OF NEW ZEALAND

For all your Printing Requirements Valley Printing Co. Ltd.

57 Victoria St., PETONE Telephone 685 451

P.O. Box 38181, Petone

Ihomson Lewis

& Co. Ltd.

SOFT DRINKS

WELLINGTON; WANGANUL & PALMERSTON NORTH

"THE MOTORIST"

> FOR ALL MOTORING) REQUISITES

10 BRANDON ST WELLINGTON: PHONE 728.833

ADS:

REAL ESTATE

Land Subdivision & Development

Specialized Services: Suede, Leather, and Drapery Cleaning

BFISDCI Australia

Integrity— and

DAVID JONES'

cannot state its worth! YET - In this age of changing values, it is rarely men-tioned. Perhaps the word itself is now old-fashioned? WELL, NOT with us. WE BELIEVE in sincerity. WE BELIEVE in honesty AND WE BELIEVE in quality. In short, we believe in a 'fair deal' -- which is what integrity is all about. We've functioned - and flourished - for 138 years, on these principles. And because WE'RE

HERE TO STAY - we're not going to for-

QUEENSLAND BINDING

SERVICE

Æ.

Camera and Electrostatic Plate Making

OPALS Opal Specialists

The Rock Shop

Think Tirst

OF MONITOR ADVERTISERS

· Loose leaf coil punching and binding

Offset Duplicating — photocopying

Stationery • Wedding Invitations

Plastic Coating of Documents

Business cards

Phone (07) 262 1588

288 Abbotstord Road

Albion, Brisbane 4010.

OFFSET and LETTERPRESS PRINTING

In the City, Garden City and Toombul,

Integrity is not a price tag - one

India

New government opts for 'genuine nonalignment'

Jatti - a message from Desai

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

New Delhi The new government of India has given itself a deadline of less than a year to restore to the country the balance between the people and Parliament and between Parliament and

At the same time, it has gone on record as pledging to honor all foreign policy commitments of the government it replaced, including the 20-year treaty of friendship with the Soviet Union. But it stresses that its chief foreign policy objective will be "genuine nonalignment" and that the special relationship implicit in the Indian-Soviet pact no longer will be a cornerstone

In a major policy statement read to the opening session of the new Parliament by acting President B. D. Jatti on behalf of Prime Minister Morarji Desai, the government promised "a comprehensive measure" to amend the Constitution "during the course of the year."

Mr. Desai's speech said "The most fundamental task is to remove . . . curbs on the fundamental freedoms and civil rights of the people, to restore the rule of law and the right of free expression to the press."

The outgoing government of Prime Minister liament indicated that special attention is to be The outgoing government of Frince States of Internal paid to farming and to "Maximizing employed and to state of Internal paid to farming and to "Maximizing employed and to state of Internal paid to farming and to "Maximizing employed and the state of Internal paid to farming and to "Maximizing employed and the state of Internal paid to farming and to "Maximizing employed and the state of Internal paid to farming and to "Maximizing employed and the state of Internal paid to farming and to "Maximizing employed and the state of Internal paid to farming and to "Maximizing employed and the state of Internal paid to farming and to "Maximizing employed and the state of Internal paid to farming and to "Maximizing employed and the state of Internal paid to Internal pai emergency that had been in force for 201/2 ment." The main campaign promise of the months and which gave rise to the author- Desai-led Janata Party was "liberty and bread itarian tendencies rejected by the voters at the plus work for all in 10 years." March 16-20 elections. This served to restore The government already has lifted the state the right of the people to move in the courts of external emergency declared in 1971 and n for protection of their fundamental liberties, to force when Mrs. Gandhi clamped down the lift press censorship, and to free all remaining ternal one in June, 1975. This move is seen

But when the Constitution was amended by a relaxed attitude toward neighboring Chin Parliament last November, certain features of and l'akistan, with whom India has been set the emergency were institutionalized. It is this ing improved relations since last year. machinery that the three-day-old Desai government is pledged to dismantle.

is yet to be spelled out, but the speech to Par-gency.

QUALITY

FASHION

FITTING

The Queensland shoe stores that footwear for me women and

MATHERS

Vic Jensens

Stores—Brisbane. Suburbs and Country.

SHIRLEYS SHOES

Mail Orders

here mainly as a symbolic gesture suggesting storing diplomatic relations with both countries The Desai administration's economic policy but had resisted ending the external emer-

Brisbane

Australia

"Our aim is to enable Monitor readers to see and understand other people of the world, as those people understand and see themselves."

Geoffrey Godsell Overseas News Editor The Christian Science Monitor

With the world as his beat, Geoffrey Godsell brings to his editing task the perspective and affection of one who meets both the front-paged world leaders and the unpaged world's people with respect and curiosity.

A product of three British institutions—Cambridge University, the Royal Navy, and the BBC-he speaks French, Italian, German, some Arabic, and a smattering of American-English. Godsell has been likened to a walking, if not running, encyclopedia. Through his team of correspondents he looks for the accurate diagnosis of events that will lead to understanding and the resolution of conflict.

So you find the world smaller and less confusing in the Monitor. Think of the Monitor as your source for clear thinking on the world.

Just use the coupon.

CURE-ALL PEST CONTROL Member Pest Control Assoc., Q'land

Specialising in

 Bird Proofing White Ants
 Borers ALL kinds of Pest Control

349.8572 (all hours) 37 Benaud St., Upper Mt. Gravatt

PRINTERS STATIONERS

Wedding Invitations No-carbon Business Forms

IAN H. TRETHA T & G Bidg. Accounting Corner Arcade and Albert St. Machine Forms Tel, 21,0962

Representatives Cali 221.5425 SPRING HILL, BRISBANE

An Invitation

If you like Personalized Dry Cleaning

DIAMONDS DRY CLEANERS

274 Edward St., City 452 Brunswick St., Valley 223 Hawken Drive., St. Luci Tel. 52.1791

9 Seewert Rd., Ashgrove 38,2318

6

columns

PHOTOGRAPHIC

THE

"RING" SHOP

Rings for every occasion

If you want a ring

you'll find it at

YOUR

ENGAGEMENT I

RING

Herbert Smalls ORGAN CLASSES Camera Centre ADULTS Grand Central Arcade AND

Tel. 21.0355 New Valley Centre CHILDREN Also Shoppinglows and Shopping Centra Also Townsville Q

CONN ORGAN CENTRE Only Address

FREE

CONN

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

WE care for YOU

Use our Free Stroller Service

Shop for the entire family's complete wardrobe

Mc Donnell & East

George St. Brisbane/Garden City Mt. Gravatt

· For Home Requirements

"A Triumph in Tone"

For Cafeteria or

Coffee Lounge

Use our Free Car Park

Whilst you . . .

61 Musgrave Road Red Hill Q, 4059 Phone 36 2840 a/h 30 2099

Read&Respond TO MONITOR ADS

PERFECTO GATES & WIRE WORKS

Window Grilles
 Gates

WROUGHT IRON

Ballustrading • Ornamental Steel Doors Step Stringers • Tubular Roof Supports

ELECTRICAL

All Types Installations and. Repairs

J. L. WATTS Pty. Ltd. Tel. 55.2465

R. E. NOBLE Polishing Service

> Specialising Genéral Office Cleaning

55,2325 3 Norman Terrace

Gifts and Souvenirs Australian Specialists Mail Orders Filled

HAMMOND ORGANS

An outstanding range of models for Home, Church, and professional entertainment, Consult the Hammond people in Queensland.

& PAUNGS KINGS

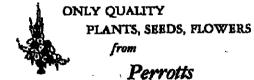

88 Queen St., Brisbane. 209 Queen St., Brisbano and all Branches.

Edward Street, City • Garden City • Indooroopilly oppingtown • Wynnum • Topwoomba • Coolangatta

Shop 20, City Plaza 38 Bowen Bridge Rd., Brishane 52,7877

PAINTING DECORATING PAPERHANGING

N. A. BIGG & SONS

Tel. 59.2139 114 Main Avenue Wavell Heights

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR London Bureau, 4 Grosvenor Place, London, England SW1X 7JR

Box 125, Astor Station, Boston, MA, U.S.A. 02123 Please start my subscription to the weekly international edition of the Monitor:

U.S. W. German Swiss Francs 31.25 Pounds 7.50 Dollars Guildera 33.75 12.50 🖂 l year 15.00 62.50

itates include delivery by regular mail. Airmail rates on request. ☐ Cheque/money order enclosed in one of above currencies ☐ International Money Order to follow ☐ Bank draft enclosed (U.S. Dollars)

Name (Please print) Street

Post Code

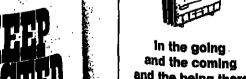

Fiat

SANITONE CERTIFIED MASTER DRY CLEANER

to visit our Salon and view our wide range of FASHIONS and newest ACCESSORY IDEAS

HLLWA Y FASHIONS

Personal attention to

and the being there TRAVELINE can help you

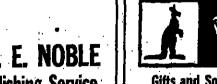

Just dial a Line to Traveline Brisbane 31 3185

Canberra Building 194 Ann Street.

CONTRACTORS

(all hours)

42 Mountridge Street Everton Park

Toy Koala Bears and Kangarops.
 Kangarop Fur and Leather Heris.
 Aboriginal Boomerangs and Crafts.
 Over 350 ideas.

See our NEW Australian Aris & Crafts Extension

ARUNGA Shop 18 City Plaza coy, Adelaide & George Sis. BRIS., O'LD., AUSTRALIA 221.0982

COMPLETE HOME FURNISHERS AND UPHOLSTERERS All Floor Coverings Expertly Measured & Laid

l. W. Gregory & Co

269 Oxley Avenue Margate, O'land Tel. 284 4772 Open All Day Saturday

Wellmarken, kostbare

Herm- und Stiluhren

Hannovei

Schuh-Cohrs

Vas Einrichtlüngskauts

mit der persönlichen Note

MÖBBL-31 a.m.b.H.

3012 LANGENHAGEN-Walsroder Strafte 136

Fernruf: (0511) 73 34 36 Lagar: Bahnhofstraßa 9

Elektro - Streuber

Inh. Horst Reinke

Schiffgraben 20 Tel. 32 57 29

NEUANLAGEN — REPARATUREN

Beleuchtungskörper

Heiz-und Kochgeräte

kamper

SÄMTLICHE KONDITOREI-ERZEUGNISSE in TADELLOSER GÜTE und AUSFÜHRUNG-Unsare SPEZIALITĂT: RAUMKUCHEN, neu auch Sacher-, Messina- und Diabetiker-Baumkuchen!

HOLLÄNDISCHE KAKAO — STUBE Konditorel und Café Friedrich Bartels

3000 Hannover, Ständehausstr. 2/3 Tel. (0511) 32 97 70

HANNOVER Teppichhaus Hartwig Meier

Berliner Allee 68 Eckhaus Marlenstrasse F. 32 34 76

Teppiche Auslegeware Gardinen Jalousien

Eigene Dekorateure und Ateller

Gute Beratung und grosse Auswahl finden Sie in unserem TEXTILFACHGESCHÄFT

mit der grossen Kleiderabteilung

Das grösste Textil-Fachgeschäft der Südstadt Hannover • Salistr. Ecke Kl. Düwelstrasse Tel. 81 67 62 und Sallstr. 68

HANNOVER-GERMANY

Das vielseitige FACHGESCHÄFT für den GARTEN- UND TIERFREUND RASENSPEZIALIST GEMÜSE- u. BLUMENSAMEN aus aller Welt. BLUMENKNOLLEN in ausgesuchten Qualitäten. BÜCHER, DÜNGER, PFLEGEMITTEL für den biologisch naturgemässen Gartenbau.

Wir bieten Problemiösungen durch Fechberatung

EBER'S SAMENHANDLUNG

3 Hannover, Welssekreuzetr. 25, Nähe Haupt-bahnhof-Lister Melle, Tel. (0511) 311766

HANNOVER

PERSÖNLICHE GESCHENKE

OFFENBACHER LEDERWAREN Sall-Ecke Lutherstr.

Koffer, Mappen, Taschen, Kleinlederwaren. SCHIRME GROSSE AUSWAHL - PREISWERT

Für Heim und Kirche PIANOS

30

Klavier-und Musikhans

Relijchowsti Alle Klein -- Instrumente

Scholipfatten - Noten 3005 WESTERFELD-HANNOYER KÖLLHBRIHKWEG 10 RUF 42 25 52 ~ 41 17 92

Wir wollen, dass Sie ZUFRIEDEN make monitor

shopping easier

chmuckentwurf und llanten, Edelsteine d Perlen. JUWELIER GEMMOLOGE JHRMACHERMEISTER

QUALITÄTS- und

MODESCHUHE

Dorndorf - Sioux - Lloyd

Orthopadie

REICHHALTIGE

AUSWAHL

Wohnzimmer

Kleinmöbel

Teppiche-Brücken

HANNOVER

KUNTZE & BURGHEIM

Eine gute Reinigung

Fertige Bett- und Tischwäsche

Nass- und Trockenwäsche

Hemdendienst

Chemische Reinigung

Küchen

Lister Melle 104

Am Lister Platz

Werkstätten für

DAMEN - und HERREN - SALON

DAMEN - SALON

SILVIA — FRISUREN G.m.b.il. an der Christus Kirche

Königstr. 4 Tel. 32 08 47

Reuter

international coiffures

Tel. 1 57 57

Der DAMEN-FRISEUR mit der freundlichen Note.

Engelbosteler Damm 1, Tel. 71 2054

Offnungszeiten: Mo.13-18, Di.Mi.8-f Do.Fr. B-18,30, Samst. 7-13.

Geschäftsführer: Friseurmeister Peter SCHRÖDE

TASCHENBUCHLADEN

tabula Lister Meile, an der Ampel Wedekindstr

Die führenden Taschenbuchverlage zeigen wir Ihnen mit den wichtigen Reihen komplett.

 $oldsymbol{\mathcal{L}}$ evenhagen & $oldsymbol{\mathcal{D}}$ aris Tel. 313055

Besuchen Sle

unsere FACHGESCHÄFTE für Aussteuerartikei und Bellwaren. Grosse Auswahi in: HERREN-Wäsche, DAMEN-Wäsche, KINDER-Wäsch MATRATZEN

Willy Hoffmeyer

HANNOVER, Lutherair. 43 Tel. 81 01 29 und Salistr. 46 HERMANNSBURG, Billingstr. 9

KEIDEL

LEBENSMITTEL FEINKOST

Hannover Königstr. 24

IHR FACHBERATER

Papier- und Schreibwaren Gaschenkartikel Organisationsmittel Bäromaschinen

Süromöbei

VERMIETUNGEN GRUNDSTUCKS-AN- 4. VERKAUF

Tel. 325191

3 HANNOVER

BOURQUIN Handar

Das Spezialgeschäft für: DAMEN-MODE

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

MODISCHE BABY- UND

KINDERBEKLEIDUNG

WOLLE. HANDARBEITEN, STICKEREIEN

Bahnhofstrasse 83, 8023 ZURICH Tel: 01 25 68 33

Fillale: Einkaufszentrum GLATT Tel: 01 830 10 70

MATHIAS HOLZER INNENDEKORATIONEN SIGNAUSTR. 11 M. HOLZER 8032 ZÜRICH 8008 ZÜRICH

Das gute Fachgeschäft für schöne Vorhänge

Neuanfertigung und Umarbeitung von Polstermöbeln und Bettwaren

32 22 89

32 22 95

Tel. Zürich

Spannteppiche

ELEKTRO-

ANLAGEN durch

Frick+Co.

Arbeitsgebiet: EWZ - Stadt Zürich EKZ - Kanton Zürich Telephon-A-Konzession Forchstrasse 50. Zürich 8

Electricians

Coiffure Louis Biosthetique

Storchengasse 14 8001 Zürich Telefon 27 05 26

make shopping easier! Officentaller CONFISERIE

Blumen

Fleurop

Service

UHREN BIJOUTERIE

Langstrasse 234

Anrig

Tel. 32 45 40 / 34 75 02

sämtt. führende Marken der Kosmeilk + Parfumerie Prompte Hauslieferung.

Toilet Articles

Kranich

Spezialgeschäft Bilder-PHONE 23 57 47

Selnaustrasse 48 8001 Zürich Tel. 23 75 19 Table and Bed

OMEGA

Watchmaker Ford Londi and

Zurich

SHOP

New Zealand seeks fishing limit

By Allstair Carthew Special to The Christian Science Monitor

200-mile fishing zone off its coastline, although move in August. it lacks the facilities to fully exploit the zone itself and is ill-prepared to patrol it against countries that can. To further complicate the picture, the move is being made in cooperation with the still smaller South Pacific island countries that are New Zealand's neighbors, at least one of which has been approached by the Russians on the possibility of setting up a fishing base there. New Zealand is surrounded by a vast area of untapped fishing riches - almost 1.5 million square nautical miles - which would be the fourth-largest zone in the world. boats to exploit the rich fishing ground, even ches from just outside the limit. Until now, this country has waited for the must seek permission to fish."

UN Law of the Sea Conference to resolve the 200-mile-zone issue. But if the next session of the conference in New York in May fails to do Wellington, N.Z. that, informed sources here say, the govern-Little New Zealand is preparing to declare a ment of Prime Minister Robert Muldoon will

The Muldoon government has been concerned for more than a year over the Soviet interest in establishing a fishing base on the island kingdom of Tonga. As a consequence, there has been an increasing emphasis here on helping the island countries to establish industries that would prop up their waning economies and keep their workers at home.

Mr. Muldoon sought and won agreement from the island leaders that a move to 200-mile zones should be concerted, a tactic that observers say obviously was based on the theory But the fishing industry here is small and of strength in numbers, which would forestall generally inefficient. There are few large attempts by outsiders to "pick off" the smaller islands one by one.

within the present 12-mile limit. Thus, other In fact, the zones of the island countries countries such as Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, would almost interlock with New Zealand's, and the Soviet Union regularly reap large cat- leaving, in the words of one observer, "a lot of ocean that Northern Hemisphere countries

Buroartikel

Papierwaren

Bastelartikel

Geschenkartikel

Forchstrasse 14

Telelon 32 07 75

ZURICH 2

GENERAL WILLE-STRASSE 8 TEL. 36 53 44

Alice und Charles Naef

Albrecht Chläpfer am Linthescherplatz

Blankets Travelling Rugs

COMPLETE

Klarastrasse 3

8008 Zürich

Tel. 34 36 34

Alle

Brennmaterialien

und Helzoele

Fuels 😅

Linen

Hlexander HERRENMODE AG KREUZPLATZ

Zürich, Oerlikon and Glatt, Switzerland

Symbol for fine Knitwear

Ladies' Ready-Made Gowns

Zwei Modehäuser-Ein Begriff

AM STAUFFACHER BADERNERSTRASSE 44/46 UND BEIM CENTRAL LIMMATQUAI 106, TEL. 01 39 40 30

MONITOR advertisers appreciate YOL

FOTO HAAS

Hannover, Kirchröderstr. 99 und am Aegl, Breitestr. 4 Ruf 1 84 64

und viele Läden

ICEPUP WITH MONITOR ADS

OTTO HERRMANN Volgersweg 4 Tel. 0511/817025

Engelbosteler Damil Tel. 0511 - 71703

Interiorie Waterway ZÜRICH !

Specialist for finest Pralinés ALEMONIATE TEL 32 26 05 TEL 27 13 90

Zollinger am Schaffhauserplatz

Florist

Tel. 26 63 92

Jeweller

Monitor advertisers

By Takashi Oka

Staff correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

El Beshiry, Sudan

Tall and erect, in spotless white jellaba, Kajammar Elssa, the village chief, tells the story of this oasis that has been saved from encroachment by the desert:

"You see that ridge over there, behind our houses?" he asks, pointing to a long ridge crowned with trees. "Seven years ago that ridge was a plain sand dune . . . no trees, no grass."

The dunc hung menacingly over the village like a curling wave, ready to overwhelm its inhabitants at any moment. The people tried to stop it by building their houses up against it, to no avail. Sand broke through their flimsy walls and forced them to withdraw to a second line of defense nearer their precious wells.

In his youth, the chief said, the dune was only a slight incline, and he had fields beyond it which he cultivated. But as livestock grew, and cultivated fields, too, the soil, always poor, eroded. Grasses that once naturally seeded the dunes and sprung up during the three months' rainy season no longer came. Sand increased to the point that his fields became barren. And the dune grew and grew.

Then, in 1969, after the military revolution that brought President Jaafar al-Nimeiry to power, the government came to the villagers with a proposal: the only way to tackle the dune was to enclose it with barbed wire, and then seed it with grass, tough bushes, and trees that would "fix" the sand and turn it into grazable

The government would provide the barbed wire, essential to keep goats and camels out once the grass had started to sprout. Would the villagers help with the labor? And most important, would they agree among themselves that the 650 acres to be enclosed would not be grazed by their animals?

Long arguments took place

There was long argument among the 500 heads of families in the village. Some mistrusted the government, others were unhappy at the prospect of losing the right to graze the few sticks and stumps that still survived in a said. "But as the sand invaded us, some of us

But Mr. Elssa, who had seen at firsthand what the estimated to see the selection of the citizen. And eronching sands could do to field and pasture, finally the dune on the other side of the village. And persuaded his fellow householders. The work was begin helped by 80 students who came not only from Khar to the course will come back." tourn, the Sudanese capital, but from as far away a lages around El Beshiry, seeing the success of the Libya and Algeria – countries which also were suffering project here, have been clamoring for projects to

Today the dune, though scarcely luxurious pasture fare threatened by "desert creep." Dune after land, is stable. Neal rows of sturdy leptadenia pyrotect lening dune has formed, drifting across fields of nica, brushy and fire-resistant, have fixed the same and sorghum, forcing goats and camels to go far-Grass has sprouted, and tough trees of the spiky acath and further in search of fodder. family have been planted.

family have been planted.

The fence needs constant tending, and an occasional this the result of climatic changes, or the great camel or goat has gotten in, but the villagers have them in that took place between 1968 and 1973? Or is selves set up a system of fines to punish the guilty she culprit, with overfarming and overgrazing? party. The total cost of the project over the past six peris disagree. But one thing is certain: whatever

"We used to have many more people in our oass; blame. And the Sudanese government's attitude is of and find work in larger towns, or even in and in their areas. For dozens of oases in the re-years has been 40,000 Sudanese pounds or about $100,000 hes weather may have wrought, man bears a share while Allah alone controls the weather, man can at A change those things that he has done wrong.

besert creep," says Wadieh Habashi emphatically. be result of ruthless human action, and needs huaction to contain it." Mr. Habashi, former minister ericulture, is president of the National Council of earth. Ills is the reasoning and energy largely be-Lathree-year program of battling desert encroachthat the Sudanese government has devised and hit will put to a meeting of prospective donors in program is modest: it would cost $26 million, of hit is hoped foreign donors will contribute $15 mil-The money will finance five regional centers to b demonstrations, technical assistance, seed, and other materials for what will be essentially a self-

s not only sedentary dwellers in cases that are afby desert creep. Nomads and semi-nomads, wanderings may range from a thousand-mile cirthe course of one year to a couple of hundred sout into the green-springing desert during the wet n, also are finding that they must rount farther before in search of fodder, that they must ask semy cultivators to share their land and their pask a situation that inevitably leads to conflict. During real drought of 1988 to 1973 many had to forsake nom temporarily to take up jobs in town, only to go to their camels when the situation eased.

oternments don't like nomads, because they are l lo keep track of, to collect taxes from, to get children to go to school," says a Sudanese social alst who has studied normadism for years and who ders it an intelligent response to the climatic and cal conditions of deserts and semi-arid areas. Or, Photos by Mark Ecos Revenument official said, "They are marvelous 🌬, but they aren't modern.''

market scene

hours by Land Rover west of El Beshiry lies the town of Mazroub, where a famous open-air livemarket attracts nomads and dealers from far and Early on a Monday morning, the area around the at well was a scene of dusty hustle and bustle such Ma Testament prophets might have gazed out at. s of cattle, sheep, and goats flicked their tails or quely in the already hot sun, awaiting their turn walered Straight-backed elders made their morn-Munds on donkeys, their feet trailing nearly to the l Majid Youssef, a chief of the nomadic Maganin bul himself mainly a town dweller, described the this people as he stood by the well, where a camel to a chain and bucket brought up the water simply Ming away from the well.

normadic cousins, he said, moved as far north as the Wadi Howar, 400 miles to the north, an area of only 75 millimeters of rainfall annually, where in winter they fed their flocks on gizou, a succulent nitrogen-rich grass available at no other time of year. When the rains came, they moved a couple of hundred miles south to the mountains of northern Kordofan, continuing on down to Mazroub, where they usually spent a month before repeating the cycle.

At each stage of their journey, their grazing rights were well defined, and so long as the rains came in time there was no friction with other tribes. The Maganin were herders of camel, slicep, and goats, the landscape he which they moved was too harsh for cattle.

To the south of them, where rainfall was plentiful, the Baggara were expert cattleherders and carried on a shorter, 200-mile annual cycle. The Baggara spent the three-month rainy summer south of Mazroub, in what to them would be the dry north, waiting for the waterlogged Bahr al-Arab area to dry out. Then, when lush green grass filled their homelands and the flies and insects of the rainy season were gone, they brought their cattle back down south.

Each of these people, the Maganin in the north, the Baggara in the south, moved their animals up and down on a front sometimes a kilometer wide. Normally, the two never met; the Baggara's northernmost limits were well south of the Maganins' southernmost limits.

Ranges began to overlap

But during the drought of 1968-73, and after, when grazing became progressively poorer in the north, the Maganin strayed farther and farther south, invading both cultivated lands and areas the Baggara had considered their domain. There were, of course, conflicts. More seriously, since cattle are browsers eating only grass, while camels and goats graze on bushes and tree leaves, by the time both the Baggara and the Magania had passed through an area, there was nothing left to grow the next year.

The eroded land quickly deteriorated. With no grasses or bushes to hold the soil, the invading sands blew across from the ever-present desert to the north.

A basic problem, which Abdel Majid would not admit. but which government experts are well aware of, is that the nomads, whether Magania cainel herders or Baggara cattlemen, simply have too much livestock.

A nomad's wealth is in his herds. He has little to do with a money economy, and will sell a cow or a came! only to meet an actual or imagined need.

He might buy a transistor radio for his own use. It would be difficult to persuade him, unless he became a townsman, to buy a share in the ublquitous trucks that rattle and bump from easis to easis and on to Khartoum. ferrying everything from gum arabic to live cattle and pickup trucks.

And yet the numbers of livestock now are so great that the range will no longer support them. The answer can only be more conflict, unless the nomads are persuaded periodically to sell cattle, sheep, and goats in quantity, as commercial livestockmen in other countries

Dr. Bill Payne, a United Nations development program livestock expert from Gloucestershire, England, has a novel idea to encourage this seasonal offtake of livestock. Suppose, he says, the government were to set up a kind of livestock bank in a center like Mazroub where nomads congregate.

A nomad with, say, 1,000 camels might then be persuaded to "bank" 200 of them. The bank would dispose of them at commercial rates. One camel currently fetches about 200 Sudanese pounds, or about $560. So an owner of 1,000 camels is a wealthy man by any stan-

Camels left 'in the bank'

The bank would give the owner certificates entitling him either to cash or to camels whenever he wanted. The camel owner could set off on his long trek to the Wadi Howar, secure in the knowledge that he still had the equivalent of 200 camels in the bank, and that, should drought or disease strike down any of his livestock on the hoof, the bank always would be ready to replace

Dr. Payne, who has taught livestock management all over the world, from the Flii Islands to the University of Florida, has tried out his idea here and there and found the response mildly encouraging. He admits that his might not be the only solution.

The World Bank has a more grandiose plan to build slaughterhouses in provincial centers and to transport meat thence to Khartonm and world markets in refrig-

Whatever the ultimate solution, Dr. Payne is convinced that it must be one that fits in with the nomad's life pattern, one whose advantage the nomad himself will recognize. For Dr. Payne has great respect for the nomad and his way of life.

An area of 75 millimeters' rainfall is useless to man for any kind of cultivation. Only a normad with his flocks at the right time in the right area can make full use of it. So long as he keeps his livestock within limits that the desert ecosystem will tolerate, he is making the most intelligent and productive use of the resources nature pro-

Night descends suddenly in the desert. At one moment the great red sun seems barely to be touching the horizon. The next instant there is only a pink afterglow, and stars start to fill the sky.

Under it, in the open air, Abdel Majid's young men are crooming the deep-throated "jarar," a dance in which women wrapped in lengths of gauzy cloth sway in rhythmic undulating movements while their menfulk stamp around them with staves held high-

"No, we will not be townsfolk," said one of the statwaits watching the dance. "If we lose our carnels, we will come to town and take what work we can, until wehave saved up enough to buy our animals back. You cannot deprive us of this - our herds, our stars, our song."

The ultimate solution to the spread of deserts, to which this hungry planet loses arable land each year, must fit in with the life pattern of the dwellers on the desert's fringes and must offer advantages they can recognize. A Monitor correspondent goes to a Sudanese oasis village on the edge of the Sahara to report on such an effort that worked.

CITY SHOPPING GUIDE.

Ball &

Lawrence Ltd.

An opening to Russians at après-ski chess

By Larry Eldridge

Sports editor of The Christian Science Monitor

Cheget, U.S.S.R. I can't speak their language, but I can play their game! So while visiting the Soviet Union I decided to see if I could beat a few Russians at their national pastime of chess - and sure enough I did.

I also learned that not all Russians consider Bobby Fischer an ogre or think former U.S.S.R. champion Viktor Korchnol should be hanished to outer Siberia for his recent defection to the Netherlands.

But we'll get to that. First, my introduction to the Soviets' legendary love of the Royal Game, which occurred early one snowy evening when our group arrived at a ski lodge in this Caucasus Mountain resort.

Passing through the lobby, I was immediately struck by the sight of several games in progress, each being watched intently by a half dozen or so speciators. Not exactly your typical après-ski gathering at any American or Western European resort, where one chess player is a rarity and two constitute a veritable army.

The next morning heading for breakfast, I saw the chess players at it again (or were they still continuing from the night before? One couldn't really tell). So when the weather looked bad and the skling worse, I decided to try my own hand.

I nodded to a fellow onlooker when a board became open, and we sat down to play. My Russian is nonexistent and his English was limited, but I found out he was an "engineer" (everybody in the Soviet Union is an engineer) quickly got the upper hand in the game and Russians in a much more informal and relaxed won in 17 moves. I guess I had sort of assumed atmosphere than I ever could have otherwise. that any Russian who played chess was automatically a whiz, but of course it's really just asking questions rather than answering them.

AFRICA

Republic of South Africa

Cape Province

like any other country, with players of all different strengths

By now a crowd had gathered, and my victim was replaced by a stronger player, but he too went down to defeat. So one of the group said if I'd wait a minute they'd go get somebody who could provide proper competition.

If I had any sense, I'd have quit while I was ahead, but curiosity got the best of me, so I sald: "Okay, bring on the Iron." And they certainly did.

Opponent No. 3 (we'll call him Vladimir) turned out to be much stronger than his colleagues, and he promptly ended my perfect record against the U.S.S.R. When he repeated the process four or five times during the week, I eventually got the picture. And although these sessions may have bruised the old ego a bit, they certainly did open up plenty of doors My next discovery was a pleasant one, for I in affording me an opportunity to know these Mostly my new friends were interested in

They had an insatiable thirst for knowledge about the ways of the West. Occasionally, though, I was able to turn things around and learn a little bit about their traditions too.

Vladimir (who also identified himself as an engineer) wanted to make sure right off the bat that I realized he and his friends came from the chess capital of the world. When he reeled off the names of the recent champions who came from Leningrad, it was hard to disagree. Mikhail Botwinnik, world champion almost continuously from 1948-66, grew up there; so did former world champion Boris Spassky (1969-72), current top contender Korchnol, present world champion Anatoly Karpov, and many other masters and grandmasters. Add them all together, and certainly in the three decades since the end of World War II no other city is even in the running.

During the week I met another group of chess players - this one from Moscow, And again our common interest paved the way for friendship and understanding.

As friendly as I got with both group, by few unguarded moments (or at lines to they could be relatively sure we were also got some insights into their thoughts. "Bobby Fischer is perhaps the pre player of all time - certainly he is the sha est now," Vladimir told me at one point.

And do many Russians feel this w

"It is not the official position," he sain, a smile. "But many good players feel this progress to determine the next official so championship challenger? Whom does he

"Korchnoi," he said. "But I don't sai publicize the fact."

"As with Fischer, it is not the official" tion," he said. "The papers, of come a against Korchnol. But I think there are many people who would like to see hing.

clined to such radical views. They to be high on Fischer as a player, though আ groups seemed surprised that most known are just as exasperated and baffled by Rebi strange ways as they are.

went their respective ways back to the and Leningrad, and I went mine. Not do got in much skiing, but we all leaned as think, about life in general in our two. countries. I also found a lot more la chess players I could beat than I had ex-- as well as quite a few that I couldn't ever, none of us ever forgot where to the The Russians kept telling me that I may certain I was being watched. And ty a might, I could not get any of them to enter addresses with me for possible future or Within these limitations, though, they to all exceptionally warm and friendly. And h

314 LEWISHAM HIGH ST.

and even some not-so-good players like to What about the Candidates' Matches to Again I asked him if others shared his

Muscovites I met seemed a likist

Finally the week was over. The Re-

Tailors - Hosiery and School Outfitters WARNE'S

LONDON S.E. 13 Also at Loughton Chington Upminster and Brentwood

> MANCHESTER I. Edwards & Son, Ltd.

Outfitters Ltd.

128 GEORGE LANE AND

122 HIGH ROAD

Fine Footwear since 1830 EDWARDS SERVES

YOU BEST WITH THE FINEST OF SHOES

> Personal Service: Inspection Invited Stockists of Quality

61 Deansgate, Manchester Tel: 061, 834, 1339 29 Samford New Rd., Altrinchia Td: 061, 928, 1487 to Guildhall Street, Presson

1 King Street, Lancaster Tel: 0524, 2916

MANCHESTER

SHAWS OF OXFORD STREET MANCHESTER

Seven Floors of Furniture and Carpets where expert furnishing advice is an art

OPEN DAILY 9 TILL 5:30

70 Oxford Street Manchester Phone 236-5431

MANCHESTER

PETROL -SHELL served by attendents

Didsbury Garages BURY VILLAGE

PETROL SCHOOL OF MOTORING CAR TRAILERS ^{Tel.}: 061, 445, 2693

LOMAX

Northern Ireland

Fine Clothes from Fine Cloths Hand Tailored by Carpet Specialists Parsons & FOR 50 YEARS -Parsons Offer Their Collection (Tailors) Ltd.

of Persian Rugs 29 Wellington Place, Belfast Including Many Fine Old Pieces

Viewed without obligation BY APPOINTMENT ONLY

Stockport Warehouse Telephone (061) 834 4095 Reg. Office, Ralli Buildings Stanley Street Salford, Manchester 3

OXSHOTT

OSMANS OXSHOTT 2120 & 2029

Personally serving Oxshott - Cobham - Esher – Claygate – Hinchley Wood - Leatherhead and Now you can have the kind of neighbouring districts in fireplace you've always wanted, Surrey

TELEVISION RENTAL and repairs to your TV

ELECTRICAL appliances repairs

CYCLES Sales & Repairs Raleigh ★ Hercules ★ Sun Triumph ★ Dawes ★ Edwardes

HASLETT'S

for Ladies Fashions laterials. Handbags. Blouses Corsetry and Hosiery Gloves and Knitwear

Open 6 days a week

60 Church St., Weybridge Weybridge 42335

YORKSHIRE'S LEADING GROUP OF RADIO, TV

LandL

SALON LADIES

North Wales

Colwyn Bay

Telephone 25088

Coulter For Fords

Parts and Service:

58/72 Antrim Road COMMERCIALS: 78/82 Antrim Road

J. E. COULTER Ltd. Ford Main Dealers Phone BELFAST 744744

Scotland

Some Warming News About Fireplaces

GRAYS

89 George Street

specially designed for your Handudno home, and professionally stalled by us at Grays Or choose from our large range of eady-built fireblaces. Our selec tion, and our service, are sec-

FOR ALL LADIES' AND CHILDREN'S FASHIONS AND HOUSEHOLD LINENS

GLODDAETH STREET

LLANDUDNO TEL. 77564/5 LLANDUDNO

Shoes

Distinction David Roberts

PHONE 76463 Knightsbridge House
LLANDUDNO
North Wales

Seek Out

Monitor Advertisers

HI-FI • AUDIO Pioneer—Leak—Philips Garrard—Thorens—Arena

RECORDS All Labels and Budget Discs TAPE

Turner's Audio Centre HOS-ON-SEA

North Wales

Joyce Durber

SUITS, GOWNS, COATS CASUAL WEAR SCHUHHAUS

> Branschi łauptgasse 40 Tel. 23.32.30

Switzerland

FOOTWEAR

IN ALL LEADING EUROPEAN MARKS

SOLOTHURN

Wir bieten ihnen bequemen Einkauf auf 3 Etagen: 1. Stock Geschenkartikei

Haus- & Klichengerate 1 Untergeschoss Eisenwaren, Werkzeuge

BANHOLZER

A. COSANDIER S.A.

AC

Fabrique de Cadrans, Soleure (Sulsse)

SOLOTHURN

Backerei Konditorei

Das Haus für

gute Qualität und

freundliche Bedienung Diverse Spezialitäten

Marktplatz 2

Haushaltartikel

Kunstgewerbe

ZURICH 1. RENNWEG 35 REMUND

SCHUHHAUS

Gräb

beim Grossmünster Trambaltestelle Helmhaus oder Believue

SHOES

COMFORTABLE ROOMS: EXCELLENT: KITCHEN

to Monitor Advertisers

you saw in the Monitor

CITY SHOPPING GUIDE. Natal

NOW? Well, it doesn't matter

when you are to travel as we can cope with all

TURNERS INTERNATIONAL

Mercury Lane, Durban Phone 314191 — P.O. Box 1935

Transvaal

SALON LOUIS

lovely perms, tinting, Tel. 838-6920

- OR --

OHANNESBURG

APPOINTMENTS 24-5225

Agents for

SCHULTIS SCHWAR OCKER & CO.

Transvaal

Omega Watches 233 Church Street

Pretoria Felephones 41-2556 2-3115

AUSTRALIA South Australia ADELAIDE The Co-operative

Insurance Co. of Australia, Ltd. FIRE-MARINE

CO-OPERATIVE INSURANCE HOUSE 81 Franklin Street (Adelaide)

Phone 51-2136 DELAIDE Exclusive REAL ESTATE

Deane Hill & Pariner Licenced Estate Agents BRITISH ISLES England

Patrick Arnold & COMPANY, F.R.I.C.S.

Surveyors, Valuers & Estate Agents

187 WARWICK ROAD. OLTON, SOLIHULL. 021 706 1492

BRISTOL

WIRELESS

LTD.

60 Queens Road Bristol BS8 Ire., Tel.: 20304

Specialists in TELEVISION . RADIO

RECORDS

For 50 Years and Over

With the ACCENT ON SERVICE

WILDING &

GARLICK

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS TELEVISION

W. M. REYNOLDS

& SON

Qualified Radio and Television Engineers

Over 6,000 Lighling Fittings in Stock

35/37 Masons Hill

Bromley, Kent

Phone: 460 2803

Selley's 31 Prestbury Road, Cheltenhan

Sales and Service of all Appliances

Pinder & Tuckwell 43/44 High Street Ladies' and Gentlemen's Tailors.

Monitor Advertisers

England

THE FUDGE SHO SPIANTHWAITE BROW, KB

HOME MADE FUR CHOCOLATES GREETINGS CARD OF DISTINCTION Tel. Kendal 23706

Philip, Son & Hepha BOOKSELLERS 80L

STATIONERS COLOURMEN Whitechapel Tel: 051-24 1045

1 Dee Lane 54 Brows Lane 54 Pensby Road

Harold h Levi & Co PSVA. FRVA

don, E17 9DH 9

MANCHESTER

In York: CUSSINS & LIGHT Ltd. King's Square In Selby: GOTCH'S Micklegete

& ELECTRICAL STORES,

1c Penrhyn Road TEL. 30548

HAIR STYLIST

PENRHYN

LANDUDNO

BEDDING PLANTS WREATHS & BOUQUETS Also Wide Range Of Cut Flowers And Pot Plants PEAT. COMPOST, FERTILIZERS Send For Catalogue

BATTYS NURSERIES PENRHY BAY ALSO: SHOPPING ARCADE MOSTYN STREET TEL. 49176

Crystal

China and

GIMBERT'S 129 Upper Mostyn Street

LLANDUDNO

Tel. 0492 - 78455

MARIE ET CIE

EDINBURGH

DINBURGH Martin

George Street COMPLETE HOUSE

83 GEORGE STREET EDINBURGH Phone 225-2933

GLASGOW Family Controlled Since 1832 Gardner

> FRADITIONAL • MODERN and Many Selected SMALL PIECES Open Saturday 9 A.M. to 5:30 P.M.

EXCLUSIVE

Switzerland

Creared for the elegant woman 13. RHOS ROAD, RHOS-ON-SEA TEL. COLWYN BAY 44251

WOLLENHOF

Freiestrasse 11, Basel

Knitted Goods

Children's

Department

SOLOTHURN EUROPE

HAUPTGASSE 59 4500 SOLOTHURN SOLOTHURN

Manufactory for Diets

Café Zurmühle

Tel. 22.24.01

Ditting

Speak

98a Whiteladies Road, Bristol, England. and Boys' and Girls' AUCTIONEERS 36 Jamaica St., Glasgow, C.1 School Outfitters for Cameras SURVEYORS OF ESTATE AGENT All Photographic TELEPHONE 55261 Specialists in Large Stocks of Branded and Sargain Priced Recording Tapes 24-5183 Agents for: Member Real Estate Institute Ladies & Gents Equipment In Soarborough: GOOD'S—23 Newborough CHILPRUPE BRAHMAR Rainwear. 41 King William St., Adelalde 760/762 Les Bridge Response to an ad 444 Commissioner St. AQUASCUTUM in Whitby; BARRATT'S-30 Baxtergate TEL: 832 6167/8/9 South Australia Pairview GENTLEMANS means another ad! (Sales) 31-377 CHOOSE OUTFITTERS. (Letting) 51-7450

CAPE TOWN SPRACKLENS CAPE TOWN

for Drapery Household Goods and Wearing Apparel THE WHOLE FAMILY

> Photographic Equipment KALK BAY Pharmacy

For all your

Cosmetic and

CAPE TOWN

Stockists of all High Class Cosmetics and Perfumes MAIN ROAD, KALK BAY PHONES: 8.1967, 8.7387

their ad

Tell them

TRAVELLING? LATER

BY AIR, SEA OR LAND

Just Walk In

Marie Distler Ladies' Hairdressing Merie Norman Cosmetics

CHELTENHAM

England

RADIO

LONDON Borough of Waltham Fores

LIMITED

8 ST. ANN'S SQUARE MANCHESTER

FURNISHERS

IO ACADEMY STREET

& Son Ltd. GLASGOW'S FINEST FURNITURE

JECKER AG KINDER-AUSSTATTUNGEN BABYWEAR FEINE DAMEN-

SOLOTHURN

SOLOTHURN

SOLOTHURN

SOLOTHURN

dipl. Kosmetikerin

St. Margrithenstrasse 8 Tel. 22,40.80

PAPETERIE

BOOKBINDING

am Friedhofplatz

SOLOTHURN

Tel. 22.13.07

St. Urs. Biberist

HOTEL

Tel . 065.32:32.91

HERRENWÄSCHE BELM BLEITOR Tel. 22.20.44

Institut de Beauté MILOPA - Produkte

Margrit Rätz

Porzellan-Kristal

Haus Der Grossen Formenwahl Zürich 1, Oberdorfstr. 27

RESTAURANT

home

Beatrix Potter and friends

From page 1

*Peter Rabbit — 75 years and 11 languages later

During these summers, Beatrix and her "The Tale of Two Bad Mice," and "The Tale brother found dead animals, skinned, boiled, of Mrs. Tiggy-Winkle." and assembled their skeletons, and drew every animal they could find, dead or alive.

"I do not remember a time when I did not try to invent pictures and make for myself a fairyland among the wild flowers, the animals, fungi, mosses, woods, and streams," wrote

At the end of each summer she and her brother traveled home to London with a menagerie. She wrote: "Hunca Munca is very discontented in the small old box; I am also accompanied by Mrs. Tiggy carefully concealed; my aunt cannot endure animals. I have got my hedgehog here with me, too; she enjoys going by train. . . . '

After her brother had gone to boarding school, and governesses were no longer needed, Beatrix Potter continued her own edu-

She became an expert on molds and fungi and spent much time painting them. At the age of 30 one of her papers, "On the Germination of the Spores of Agricineae," was read to the Linneaean Society by a man. Woman were not allowed to attend meetings.

After Peter Rabbit was published, came "The Tale of Squirrel Nutkin," "The Tailor of Gloucester," "The Tale of Benjamin Bunny."

At 39, Beatrix Potter became engaged to Norman Warne, the youngest son of her publisher - and her editor for four years. The marriage was opposed by her parents (who, a generation back, had made their money in cotton mills) because Mr. Warne was engaged in

When Mr. Warne died suddenly one month before the wedding, Beatrix Potter received no sympathy or aide from her parents who continued to refuse to speak of him.

Beatrix Potter bought Hill Top Farm in Sawrey, in the Lake District, but still lived at home in oppressive obedience to her parents. During the next eight years Beatrix Potter wrote the following children's books: "The Pie and the Patty-Pan," "The Tale of Mr. Jeremy Fisher," "The Story of a Fierce Bad Rabbit," "The Story of Miss Moppet," "The Tale of Tom Kitten," "The Tale of Jemima Puddle-Duck," "The Roly Poly Pudding," (now, "The Tale of Samuel Whiskers"), "The Tale of the Flopsy Bunnies," "Ginger and Pickles," "The Tale of Mrs. Tittlemouse." "The Tale of Timmy Tiptoes," "The Tale of Mr. Tod," and

"The Tale of Pigling Bland." The animals in her stories are always in character - she kept some in her room (like mice and hedgehogs); others she visited ("I the pig. It tries to nibble my boots, which is interrupting.")

Peter Rabbit now has been translated into 11 languages. When the French version was in stories "point to no moral unless it be being process, Beatrix Potter wrote, "I do not like 'Pierre Lapin.' I should call him, 'Pierre Lap- careful, may make a meal for somebodies erau.' " The names of Flopsy, Mopsy, and Cottontail became - "Flopsaut." "Trotsaut." "Queue-dc-Coton."

When Beatrix Potter was almost 50, she married William Heelis, the solicitor who arranged the sale of another farm to her. She Immediately became domesticated, and gradually resented it when her fellow English people looked up the author of Peter Rabbit - although she was more kindly to Americans. In a letter to one American, she wrote, "Never does anyone outside your perfidiously complimentary nation write to tell me that I write good prose.

Anne Emerson, the Warne editor of the Beatrix Potter books, attempted to give some reasons for the popularity of "The Tale of Peter Rabbit" which still outsells the 22 other Potter books (100,000 a year in England alone): ."It has everything: it's got Peter Rabbit - he is the rebel; it has his sisters who are good little rabbits and do as mother tells them: and it's got suspense - even though Peter knows his father was put into a pie for doing herds!"

with water and almost drowns. . . . "

Margaret Lane wrote that Beatrix Politics helpless and the simple, if they are might

Miss Emerson also noted that Beatth? did not always keep to a child's works "She believed that children enjoy a fine sional 'fine' word. For example, she said. word 'soporifie' in 'The Flopsy Bunne'

As a farmer, a landowner, a consense: who left more than 4,000 acres to the Mage Trust, and a well-known breeder of Bertali cattle, the photographs of Beatrix Poterze smilling ones, as opposed to her ginder childhood photos.

One description noted, "She is quite at the common . . . short, blue-eyed in: loured face, frizzy hair brushed tightly to dresses in a tweed skirt pinned at the! with a safety pin." Restrix Potter once asked someone you not feel it is rather pleasing to be so E. 'wiser' than quantities of young idiois?... and added, "I begin to assert myself at " In 1943 her last winter, she wrote, "I bi-managed all right as regards farming sit-At Christian Science Reading up in bed in a nightcap, interviewing 🕸 Rooms (Lesezimmer der Christlichen Wissenschaft), including the following in major cities throughout the

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Regules RESIDENT HOUSE WORKERS

Members of The First Church of Christ, Scientist and/or Branch Church of Christ, Scientist, are invited to apply: --

FOR SALE $1,200,000

Remote Hunting Lodge on 141 acres and targe lake, Nova Scotla $75,000 small hotels & pension HOTEL FOR LADIES. 200 st rooms, partial board. 625 ps

WARNIED
THE PARENTAL BASY SITH AGENCY Aways requires arts a tors for daytime & evenings of bit tors for both children & the elder, in, for both children & the elder, Sydney's North Shdre Tel. 448 to

RESIDENTIAL REAL STATE ENTIRE BOSTON AREA
ENTIRE BOSTON AREA
ENTER BOSTON AREA
ENTER

When talking child care. talk to the child I had come to the house to interview Jes-

Wellesley, Massachusetts She came to the interview wearing a black leotard, pink ballet slippers, and a disarming smile. Large pink letters across her chest announced her name: "JESSICA."

But before answering any questions Jessica Levine insisted on warming up in the kitchen with a few toe-touching exercises and a tall glass of pineapple juice. She then pulled a chair up to the breakfast table, confidently crossed her legs, and offered herself for intertogation, much the way a well-known actress might meet the press at a preview of her latest

By Stewart Dill McBride

Staff writer of

The Christian Science Monitor

Jessica Levine is six years old. She is the first six-year-old I have ever interviewed and I must confess I was the one with the sweaty

in Germany

can you buy international

the weekly edition of

THE

CHRISTIAN

SCIENCE

MONITOR.

BERLIN

Kantstr. 41

Wilhelmsaue 112

Edinburgerstr. 47

Sandkaule 5-7

Am Dobben 107

DÜSSELDORF

Bismarckstr. 72

Alexanderstr. 2

Bramfelderstr. 22

(Hauptbahnhof)

Schiffgraben 26

Landhausstr. 17

Augartenstr. 26

Schäfflerstr. 22

Hirschelgasse 21

Tübingerstr. 45

STUTTGART

WIESBADEN

Langgasse 36

MUNICH (MÜNCHEN)

Hauptbahnhof newsstand

NUREMBERG (NÜRNBERG)

HEIDELBERG

MANNHEIM

HANNOVER

FRANKFURT

HAMBURG

BREMEN

Unter den Eichen 57

Bürgermeister-Smidstr. 64

Eschersheimer Landstr. 220

Rothenbaumchaussee 25

and at newsstands at the arport and railway station

Federal Republic of Germany.

Where

sica's father, James A. Levine, a child-care specialist, who had just brought out a new book, "Who Will Raise the Children? New Options for Fathers (and Mothers)." (New York) Lippincott.) It is the product of 18 months of his combing the country for men who have chosen to take on the responsibilities and rewards of caring for their children - either as single adoptive fathers, "househusbands," or fathers who voluntarily work part-time in order to have more hours at home.

Mr. Levine (who falls into the latter category) spoke to some 120 American fathers (primarily college-educated men from middle and upper-income levels) and discovered a pioneering breed who are blurring the barriers between roles of "breadwinner" and "purturer," broadening definitions of manhood, and bucking social, economic, legal traditions and beliefs about what is "natural" for men and

The feminist movement had improved the economic position of American women (today 1/3 of the nation's mothers with children under six years old are working) says Mr. Levine and consequently forced more fathers to ask: "How should the man of the house adjust his lifestyle?"

But wait a minute. Where did Jessica and her pink ballet slippers fit into this interview? She arrived quite precisely between the time her bushy-bearded father began munching on a bowl of granola and the time he started to explain how his father had been less than "involved" in his own upbringing.

Jessica has no intention of letting this reporter get away before she got in her two cents. She was no slouch on the subject of child care. Not only was Jessica the only bona fide "child" in the room but she had accompanied her father on some of his interviewing excursions and compared notes with other children who were being cared for by their fa-

According to Mr. Levine, Jessica even has her own "office" and typewriter at the Wellesley College Center for Research on Women (where her father works). Says Mr. Levine, "She is the most prollfic member of our family, but just hasn't been published as much." (Jessica's mother, Joan, has published two children's books. Jessica's two-year-old brother still revels in stories about talking tigers but has yet to write a book of his own.) To this day Jessica is still nagging her father about when he is going to write a book on "Who Will Raise the Parents? New Options for Children."

So here was Jessica Levine, ballet dancer, author, conversationalist, six-year-old, poised between me and the man in the work shirt and corduroys whom I had been sent to interview. I had no alternative but to take out my notebook and start asking her questions. Jessica, would you say your father is different from other fathers you know? "Well." She paused and reflected. "Some daddies work a long time and don't have enough time to do things with their daughters class has arrived. She bounds down the front and sons. But my daddy and I are going to build a bunkbed. Just like David Phillips and his father." Mr. Levine proudly eyes his daugh-

The Levines: James and Joshua, Joan and Jessica.

"But I must say, Dad," Jessica turns to her father with a slight frown, "recently you haven't stayed home enough to take care of me and Joshua. It is getting rather annoying." Mr. Levine smiles and quietly explains to me wide tour to promote the new book. It's the longest period I've ever spent away from the good jobs." family. I used to work six to seven days a week. . .

"You still do, Dad," pipes in Jessica How are your mother and father different in the ways they treat you? Moniny lets me help her bake brownes.

answers Jessica, "She cooks most. . . ." "But Jessica," her father interrupts in a soft but firm voice, "Don't you remember the dinner I cooked last night? The chicken and the

Are there any important differences between girls and boys, Jessica?

"In my school the boys think that girls aren't the best baseball players. But I told them there are lots of famous girl baseball players. I can't remember their names now but Mommy told me once." She adds matter of factly, "The other difference between girls and boys ... well, I've noticed that boys hate

When you become a grownup, what would vou most like to be? She blurted out without hesitation: "A house-

Mr. Levine interjects, "That's just her way Jessica continues: "Joshua, he might fly airplanes. He likes to push buttons. Or he might steps in her dainty pink ballet stippers. It was nearly three o'clock. Time for Jim to wake up Joshua from his afternoon nap. Jim and I talked for the next few minutes about the high-paying job he had left in New York City in order to share the breadwinning with his wife and spend more time with his children. "It wasn't really a child-rearing decision at the time. We just got tired of always that he has spent the last month on a nation- moving to my new jobs and Joan's having to quit hers," he explained, "And she always had

Among other lifestyle alterations Jun Levine has shifted his jogging routine from the morning to afternoon so he can take care of Joshua when he wakes up early each morning Junsocials his days at the Center for Research on Women, in addition to the consulting he does for the Ford Foundation on day care.

By the end of our interview, Joan has arrived home from her teaching job at Wellesley High School. Jessica is back from her ballet lesson, and Joshua is sitting in his bib overalls, nursing an ice cream cone Jim had scooped for

How has the sharing of the child rearing affected your marriage?

"It's great," Joan grins. "Jimmle has always been a feminist, even before it was fashionable. He had the right attitudes and now has the time to live them out."

In the midst of a busy family, the reporter can play interloper for just so long. It was now four o'clock. Joan was late to drive Jessica to get a haircut. Joshua had had enough of his ice cream cone and wanted his father to read him one more story about the talking tiger. And finally it was time too for Jim and Josh to leave to do the shopping. And so James A. Levine, child care specialist, author, and (perhaps most importantly) father, left the house to run family errands with Joshua in one hand The doorbell rings, Jessica's ride to ballet and a bag of clean dispers in the other.

Midas touch fashions re-gild Carnaby Street lily

The Christian Science Monitor

That girl out in the blazing sun at high noon wearing a blouson jacket that looks as though she collided with King Midas: Is she a member of a rock group? Don't count on it. Most likely, she is only on to a fashion fad that is beginning to crest and may add glint, glisten,, and gleam to landscapes and city streets well into summer.

Some call it "flash dressing." Others prefer to think of it more conservatively as "daytime gold." However you describe it, 24-karat dazzle is spilling out all over department-store counters with arrays likened to Tutankhamen's

In the offing are metallic gold bikinis and other beach gear awash with gold. Meanwhile, already at hand are handbags, totes, hats, vieors, and belts of Mylar or Lurex heat-bonded to cotton jersey or nylon. Trench coats, rope covered bangles, snakeskin bracelets, flowers on a Frank Olive straw hat - evey one of them appears to have been dipped in molten gold.

is European. It started in Milan with the Florucci gold Mylar-covered tote which is banded in black and bears the Italian boutique's logo. printed in black letters. The young fashion crowd in Milan and London, where Florucci has a branch, began carrying the flashy tote as a form of protest, a youthful put-down of such signature status carryalis as Gucci and Vultton, and the rage for gold was picked up in Italian fashions made in Italy. Besides the when Elio Figrucci, nostalgic for the Carnaby Street days of the 1960s, sought to recapture and dresses. The clothes and accessories often the old swinging London scene and bring it to: make use of industrial materials and cuts: Italy. That is why all Florucci boutiques are overalls with painters' patch pockets dyed in recapitulations of mod lam — ear splitting mu. fashion colors; belts of plastic tubing filled sic kicky posters theatrical makeup and with glitter.

some very peppy ciothes.

Now it seems every manufacturer with half of Biba. If you remember your youthquake his-dard.

By Phyllis Feldkamp or soft chris to hang around the neck, ballet lory, you will recall Bibs (now unfortunately special to especial to esp London store that was pitched toward the working girl in a contemporary total concept The gold rush, like may other fashion crazes, manner, offering everything from plastic bangle bracelets to stationery and sheets and towels in coordinated designs and colors.

Before sloppy workmanship and inferior fabrics finished off the mod fashions, Elio Fiorucci carried Biba, Mr. Freedom, and some of the French ye ye clothes. He then took to hiring young graduates of London's Royal College of Art and baying their work translated into mass of metallics, the stores have the snug-The Milan store began early in the 1970s gest-fitting jeans anywhere, out-sized mohair sweaters in dizzy stripes, and rutiled pinafores some very peppy clothes.

Now it seems every manufacturer with half
Basically, Florucci is an italian adaptation an ear to the ground is going on the gold stan-

SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA, Do you require free accom. In Sydney for 3 miths from May/June 19772 Ownners travelling oversess require foeter parents for one adult & two teanese come attractive setting, close on home in attractive setting, close to transport. Domestic help provided. Phone or cable 02 4988971.

ST. JOHNS WOOD, Quiet well-fundable modern hands bed-sitting room in lady's flet. Use of kitchen & bettingen, C.H. Conversions. Cobham 3824.

ST. JOHNS WOOD, Quiet well-fundable modern hands bed-sitting room in lady's flet. Use of kitchen & bettingen, C.H. Conversions. Cobham 3824.

ST. JOHNS WOOD, Quiet well-fundable modern hands bed-sitting room in lady's flet. Use of kitchen & bettingen, C.H. Conversions. Cobham 3824.

SM RL 4 Grosvenor PI, London SWIX.7JH.

INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE Club. HQ 13 Addiscombe Grows, East Croydon, Surrey, England. Tel.: 01-850 1191.

INTERNATIONAL LANGUAGE Club. HQ 13 Addiscombe Grows, East Croydon, Surrey, England. Tel.: 01-850 1191.

BESS 2634. 200 single rooms, C25 per week part board.

Deguity service

CAPPENTRY SERVICES. Introducy, Order appleading, bathm. & 2nd W.C., boxxm., loft flitted sphotoner, introducy, David, Barting, Conflorable modern from planning to completion, Surrey, England. Tel.: 01-850 1191.

South East London. Tel.: Counter, 01-850 1191.

BESS 2634. 200 single rooms, C25 per week part board.

Deguity service

VANDA BEAUTY COUNSELOR Mrs.

Putney, London, SWI5 BNE. Telephone 01-788 4132.

CRACKINGTON MAYER.

CARPENTRY SERVICES. Introducy, of flethed sphotones partition, of flitted sphotones in totally outper, body, bathm. & 2nd W.C., boxxm., loft flitted sphotones and the down. Tel.: Counter, 01-850 1191.

CARDINATE TUTOR specialises in chill. The produced in chill mind later.

South East London. Tel.: Counter, 01-850 1191.

ST. ANNE'S MANAGEMENT Selection of the degree and preparatory and pre week part board.

beauty service

VANDA BEAUTY COUNSELOR May be desired throughout the U.K. Norah Gibson, 14 Carmail Gardens, Pulney, London, SWI5 BNE. Telephone 01-788 4132.

CRACKINGTON HAVEN. CORN.

CRACKINGTON HAVEN. CORN.

WALL. Guests welcome in comfordable ability of the common of the com

don contral. Ashbys, Comain (S)

North Contwell, St. Genny's sou.

CAR RENTAL, CHAUFFEUR SPAIN: near Cadiz, quiet, villa 18
DRIVEN/SELF DRIVE, Wynn-Saville, rent, sleeps 4/5, 5 mins. to sandy 17 Radley Mews. London W.S. 01
937 4588.

Salving Communication Drive, Chaitenham, Glos, England. Tel.: 024223745.

WRITE & SELL Children's stories, y Mail course (Air Mail) with sales as 5 stance. Free booklet. Children's stories of the course of the cour

ADJOY CATERING. Parties, dances.
ADJOY CATERING. Parties, dances.
TREVOSE HEAD, NORTH CORNwordings, battecuse, any functions WALL European 6-berth caravan on lovely site alongside beautiful, sendy Catering, 180 Pampisford Road, South Croydon. Tel: 01-860 8813.
Cleaning services

WETTON CLEANING SERVICES

TREVOSE HEAD, NORTH CORN-LESLIE'S SCHOOL OF MOTORING.
Established over 25 years. Leslie blichcott. M. Inst. A.M., M.O.E., 941
Hichcott. M. Inst. A.M., M.O.E., 941 Christichurch Road, Pokesdown Tel. Pokesdown Tel. Pokesdown Tel. Pokesdown Bournemouth.
Apply 17 High St., Padstow. Tel: 40888.

WETTON CLEANING SERVICES

dressmaking

DORIS PUSEY, High-class dressmaking, including Readers dresses. $125/wk. May-Labor Day of Stations. Remodelling. 23 Loveday mo./rates. White sand bob., shelling. Road, Wast Ealing, London W13 9JT. Apollo, 2945 Guil of Mexico Or., 35577. (813) 383-3967.

houses for sale

Cleaning services

Cleaning services

WETTON CLEANING SERVICES.
LTD. 43 Cadogan Street, Chelsea
S.W.3. Tel. 01-589-7747 5228/7747

MELLON, Mavaglasey, Dinner, bed, Clondon Area) Window, General
Coveriboding sandy besch. Tel: 072884-2247.

Section Coverage Area Coverage Coverage Area Cov

Offices to let

PRACTITIONERS OFFICE has time available in Regent Street between Out-722 4885.

PRACTITIONERS OFFICE has time applicants should be available for inserview. Write with full particulars and names and addresses of variety eas, to Fan Court School, Longovose Road, Chertsey, Surjey, KT16 OOL.

RIVERSIDE HOUSE ORGAN STUDIOS LTD. NURSING HOME

selections of ORGANS & PIANOS in the country for

REMOTE RETREATS CASTLE IN SWITZERLAND

Beach & Ocean Fronts Mountaintops & Hideaways SHELDON BELINKOFF 1760 Solano Avenue, #301 Berkeley, CA 94707 U.S.A.

Period property, consisting affactshop, ample fiving accommodershop presently used for successful tique business. Apply. 78. W Street, Broadway, Tel. 2767.

home, church or school.
Special terms available for readers of The Christian Science Monitor.
Credit terms available.
Part exchange
Free delivery U.X.
Open 9:30-6:30: Mon. Sat.
4 Richmond Road
KINGSTON-on-THAMES
Tel. 01-548-1231

Dost vacant

MILL HILL, LONDON. Lady offeren nice furnished bedeitting rm... use bath & kitchen, exchange approx. 10

EXPERIENCED MANAGER with artistic conductive method of the service of the serv

DIRECTOR

Realtors L

people/places/things

The Biafran war: an Ibo soldier remembers

After collapse, officer sought exile in Texas

By Richard L. Fricker Special to
The Christian Science Monitor

Denton, Texas

Among those attending North Texas State University is a slightly built African with an almost boyish smile and a very correct British way of speaking. Celestine Eze Onukogu is a Nigorian. More specifically he's an Ibo and as such living in a self-imposed exile.

Mr. Onukogu's road to exile began Jan. 14th, 1970, when Maj. Gen. Philip Efflong, the chief of staff of secessionist Biafra, surrendered to his former Sandhurst classmate and Nigerian bead of state Yakubu "Jack" Gowon, bringing to end a war which the world had watched with shifting sympathies and little understanding for a little over 30 months.

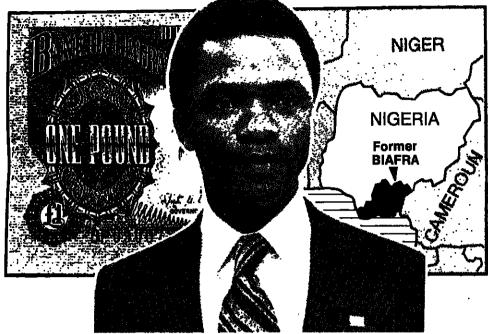

He speaks about Biafra, the war, and the Ibo only if asked. He seems surprised anyone would be interested in such things. A chief's son, Mr. Onukogu received a better-than-average education. He was commissioned into the militia as a lieutenant in 1967, when he was 19.

"Across the country there was a young man from every family in the army," he explains. "There was nobody from my family except my father who was a member of the constitutional assembly. School had been closed because of enemy bombing, and I had nothing to keep me busy. I felt it was time I did something for the

Fighting day-to-day

Mr. Onukogu says most Biafrans felt Nigerian forces could be kept outside the borders of the breakaway state. He says soldiers in the field were never really sure about the way the war was going. "You were fighting on a day-to-

The war ended for Mr. Onukogu on Oct. 27th. 1968, when he was shot in the leg and taken to a rear area for treatment. There he began to feel Biafra might lose. Recuperating, he was to Mr. Onukogu. He says the soldiers "got too

Celestine Eze Onukogu: "I just didn't have enough guns and supplies"

he now feels hampered Biafra's cause.

Junior-officer life offered a freedom few young lbos had known. "It was good, for one thing it was employment," Mr. Onukogu recalls. "You had money. I had lived off my family since I was a boy, and then I joined the army and began making my own money. It was thrilling" He explains that "most of the officer corps was comprised of people like me," students or young men seeking employment or a way to defend their lives and home-

"We had luxuries the public didn't have," he observes. "I had a vehicle, a driver, a batman or two, a weapon, and food. The average public at that time didn't have three meals a day."

This freedom corrupted the army, according able to enjoy the benefits of his rank - benefits - committed and went out among the helpless population commandeering personal property in the name of the government." Disciplinary action was taken from time to time, but it was not very vigorous, he says.

> Army grew corrupt "They were not trained soldiers," he says, fore the Ibo, as a people, can enjoy full recalling his men, "they were just nation-ness." He notes, as did many journalists alists," and he adds that "the army got more corrupt than the civilians."

felt bad that we did not realize our goal, which ally among Nigerians. was to keep Biafra a nation and our fate in our As for himself he says: "I am bahands." But the defeat does not seem to have what I like to do, being a student if the 'affected him unduly. "I was not well equipped had not happened I would have been s and was fighting a better equipped enemy. He where in life today. I am trying to put my was not more sophisticated, or better trained. Through school, do my share, contribute to or more determined. I just didn't have enough clety. I consider Nigeria as my origin h guns and supplies to fight as a soldier."

After the Blafran surrender Mr. Onnie brigade commander sent him to look for Bir families, and he disappered behind enemy disguised as a civilian Red Cross worker F a month he lived with government the "Like our soldiers they were 'win the war's sons and felt like conquerors," Mr. Onthe remembers.

The war left the Ibo nation in rules But currency was declared vold. Even lettroops ran short of supplies and began reremaining the food stocks.

Today the Ibo are making a rapid comek Mr. Onukogu explains that conquest acts. aided their economic recovery. He points that there was nothing left in Blafra eue private possessions, so people came into devastated area selling goods. The lbo, ac. as middlemen, shrewdly cultivated their b customer, the Nigerian Army,

'Soldiers had money'

"It was the practical thing to do," Mr 0: komt says. "Soldiers had money, If yo k marketable property you sold it."

He left Nigeria for the United States als 1st. 1971. He has never returned homeas not sure he ever will. On weekends have as a hotel auditor while studying for the

Looking back on the war, he feels two great lesson" for the Nigerian people doesn't accomplish anything Our policy could have been solved without war, but leaders were bent on fighting, so welld

Mr. Onukogu says it will be a long time time, that the war against the Ibo look of appearance of genocide. He says it was Mr. Onakogu ended the war as a captain. "I very long time before there is a national consider that I belong to the world."

Preserving England's not-so-stately homes

By Alan T. Band Special to The Christian Science Monitor

Singleton, England There is more to preserving Britain's past than the restoration of castles and ornate baronial estates. After all, not everyone lived in a

That's why many country farmhouses and market halls are being preserved - intact from original bricks to roof rafters - at the 45acre Weald and Downland Open Air Museum here in Singleton, near Chichester, Sussex.

The open-air museum was founded by a group of conservationists who were concerned over the rate at which modest country dwellings, classed as "vernacular architecture." were disappearing from the modern scene. To qualify for admittance to the collection, a building must be in clear danger of being destroyed. Once it qualifies, its background is carefully established from local records and land deeds. Sketches are then made and photos taken of important structural details, such as the geometry of roof timbers.

After that the building is dismantled and each piece given an identification tag before it is transported by truck to a location on the museum grounds.

Then the meticulous, jigsaw-like task of rebuilding begins - a task requiring the expertise

The nonprofit museum, open year-round, was established in 1969, and eventually will time staff members are aided by some 250 vol-

Exhibits include Bayleaf Farmhouse, built originally on a site in Kent, England, around 1420, and said to be one of the finest examples of architecture remaining from that period.

Also here is the mid-16th-century Titchfield Market Hall. This particularly interesting Tudor specimen from Hampshire, is popular with visitors; the lower part of the building was used as a marketplace where crowds would mill around the stalls on weekly market days, while upstairs local council, or guilds of craftsmen, would meet to govern local community

A granary from 1731, a thatched barn with a date inscription on the roof rafters of 1771, a reconstructed 13th-century flint-rubble cottage, an 1807 tollhouse complete with a well preserved toll board stating charges for various modes of transportation that passed its way are all on view at the museum.

15th-century farmhouse opens its doors to 20th-century visitors

Also of note is a reconstructed charcoal farmyard animals huddled on the earlies burner's camp, including the kiln, where you protected from the cold and wild animal protected from the cold animal prot can see demonstrations of techniques used to side. produce charcoal in ancient times.

More than just a collection of architecture, alone to re-create the past here; the buildings present an insight into life-styles

In addition to viewing the initial life styles.

black swinging pot hangs over an open fire in Because of its spaciousness and committee middle of the floor Well-worn steps leading ting, the open all exhibit prosents a supple a single bedroom tell of big families portunity for a day's outing into the sleeping together for warmth in the winter. while downstairs, cows, chickens, and other, seum's rembling meadows.

But visitors need not depend on in the Standing in the kitchen of a medieval village house, it is possible to imagine the aroma of with many of the same tools used in black swinging about the rafters as a

Bombs and air crash spotlight Canaries problems

By Joe Gandelman Special correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Problems are mounting for Spain's scenic Canary Islands - and the worst crash in civil aviation history is likely to make them worse.

Madrid

The March 27 crash of jumbo KLM and Pan Am 747 jets in the Canaries, which killed more than 580 persons, may spell more trouble for the islands, which already pose an ominous breakaway threat to the Spanish Government. According to Spanish press reports, an earlier bomb explosion at Gando airport in Las Palmas on the most important of the islands, caused various airlines to switch their flights to Los Rodeos on Tenerife, the second most important Island, where the crash occurred. Responsibility for the bomb explosion was claimed by MPAIAC (Movement for the Selfdetermination and Independence of the Canary Archinelago). The movement is led by the extreme-left lawyer Antonio Cubillo, who has an anti-Spanish radio show beamed nightly to the Canaries from Algeria.

(Algerian relations with Spain have been strained ever since Spain acquiesced in the partition of the former Spanish colony of Spanish Sahara between Morocco — a power rival of Algeria's - and Mauritania. The territory is on the "shoulder" of Africa just southwest of

Mr. Cubillo admits responsibility for the Las Palmas explosion, but insisted, "We do not consider ourselves responsible for the bad technical conditions Los Rodeos airport maintains. We all know the cause of the accident, and only can tell you that MPAIAC has no responsibility for it."

From page 1

★U.S. defense budget

"The budget committee has simply gone it own merry way. It has flagrantly ignored the party leadership, two presidents, and the recommendations of four committees that specialize in these matters."

Chairman Robert N. Gialmo (D) of Con neeticut, who led the fight for the cuts, charged that the Pentagon had overlooked at least seven significant areas for reductions.

"There's a strong feeling in the country and in the Congress" about defense spending, Mr. Gialmo says. "There's a great deal of money that can be removed from the budget without npinging on the U.S. defense posture."

Mr. Glaimo echoed other members of Congress who are concerned that, if the Pentagon doesn't reduce manpower costs and other over head, the U.S. will be unable in coming years to match the Soviets in spending for things like planes, ships, and tanks.

So Mr. Glaimo suggested, and the committee approved, these reductions in budget author-

1 Manpower: $750 million. Quick savings are possible, Mr. Giaimo argues, by reducing military transfers and bringing about effi dencies in training procedures.

, 2 Purchases: $1 billion. The White House is wing too quickly to stockpile ammunition liler items, ss tter studies. 3. Foreign military sales: $500 million. Present Carter is among those who have said the U.S. should cut sales. 4. Strategic stockpile: $200 million. Reserve are too big, according to evidence provided by the Federal Preparedness Agency. Limited dis-Posal could bring savings, Pentagon critics

5. Financial adjustments: $1 billion. Unspen palances in the Pentagon will reach $62.4 billon by the end of the current fiscal year. This can be trimmed, the committee decided, by even more than the chairman recommended. They boosted the trim to $1.3 billion.

6. Inflation account: $600 million. Pentgon purchases next year were to include an allowance for inflation, but the committee knocked

7. Other Items, $300 million. Included: limin accumulation of nuclear-warheads.

Vance and Brezhnev

⋆Détente and Brezhnev

Mr. Brezimev promptly paid his own debts to them, but in time he, too, began to balk at their demands, which produced several clearly klentifiable political struggles in the Kremlin. He won some, and he lost some.

If and when Mr. Brezhnev goes, the pattern of struggle - which is determined by certain constant factors of power in the Soviet bureaucratic system - will be much the same as in previous conflicts.

Even if the hard-liners should prove less successful than they have in the past in imposing their policies on the rest of the leadership, the period of instability and maneuvering in the Kremlin would limit the scope for foreign pollcy initiatives and negotiations. They always require concessions by both the Soviet Union and the United States, if any progress is to be

But a new leadership in the Kremlin, uncertain of its power, looking over its shoulders at the military and conservative factions, is hardly likely to be in a position to make any far-reaching concessions to foreigners. Its primary concern would be to consolidate its power, which would mean a series of concessions to domestic hard-liners and a period of immobility in foreign policy.

Stagnation of this kind, once it sets in, takes several years to overcome.

Neither Washington nor Moscow will make concessions in the strategic arms talks which

try. By now they both know that this is the one weaken the United States. law of the strategic arms talks that will never be broken - yet they both keep trying to break Defense Intelligence Agency, the Pentagon's quite unacceptable to the other side.

Negotiations are also accompanied by the in-reaching the point of breakdown. The reality is loss dramatic. The SALT process is not in any danger of breaking down. But if it fails to regain momentum, the result could be just as bad. The resumption of the SALT negotiations could lead to real progress, only if both sides recognized that in each capital there are powerful forces which favor rapid and meaningful progress - and equally powerful forces which are opposed to it. In Moscow, the hawks point to the U.S. millitary-industrial complex and the unreliability of capitalist politicians as a reason why the Soviet Union should strive for the highest possible degree of military security, rather than make the concessions which would make SALT a success. In Washington, the hawks maintain that the Soviet leadership is united in seeking military superiority over the West, that there is no such thing as a Soviet dove, and that any might detract from the security of either coun- concession to the Kremlin would simply

Gen. Daniel Grahum, the former head of the it, at least at the beginning of every round of own intelligence branch, who was a leading negotiation, by presenting proposals which are member of "Team B" which disputed recently the CIA's more moderate conclusion about the tensification of the hawk/dove struggle in each about hawks and doves in the Kremlin is "painature of the Soviet threat, argues that all talk capital, where every contemplated concession pable nonsense." Any such notion, he believes. brings forth the cry of "treason" from the can be entertained only by those "ignorant" of hawks, while every hard-line demand causes the nature of the Soviet state. He warms that the doves to fear that the negotiations are we cannot afford more blunders based on this kind of analysis, because "they could prove (a-

> It is, however, arguable that those who perceive some of the Kremlin's past power struggles in terms of hawks and doves - as does Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security adviser, who has spent a lifetime in the study of Soviet affairs - are not 'ignorant" of the nature of the Soviet state. True, even White House advisers have been known to talk palpable nonsense. But, if the White House analysis of the Soviet leadership situation takes into account the hawk/dove relationship in the Kremlin, it may be able to avoid some of the blunders made by previous administrations - and succeed in getting a good SALT agreement with Mr. Brezhnev be-

> > ®1977 Victor Zorza

From page 1

★ Lesser powers

Egypt would come in sufficient quantity to viet Union towards the U.S.

today as when Mr. Sadat made his switch from clination yet to disgorge its spoils from the 1967 war.

If those two expectations continue to be unfulfilled throughout the entire year of 1977, Mr. Sadat's political mandate is likely to run out. The outlook is that he must deliver on his promises or be replaced. Would his successors. whoever they might be, be likely to continue to look to Washington? More probably they would again turn to Moscow in the hope of getting more from Moscow than Mr. Sadat had been able to get from Washington.

Most other prospective changes in alignment are less dramatic than those of India and Egypt; but still typical of this less rigid and less ideological world of today. The Carter administration is moving ahead with talks with ited trims in overseas military assistance and Cuba. More talks seem likely between Amerin accumulated trims in overseas military assistance and Cuba. More talks seem likely between Amerin accumulated trims in overseas military assistance and Cuba. icans and Vietnamese! Washington is even Moscow to Washington. Some observers think United States, increasingly disenchanted with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger: it is decidedly worse. And Israel shows no in- Ethiopia's new military dictatorship, has cut off American aid to that country. Fidel Castro of Cuba has been through there talking up a possible Soviet connection to the present rulers. Ethiopia could swing to Moscow tomorrow - and a lot of people in Washington would be delighted to put that unattractive association on to Moscow's back.

But meanwhile Arabs friendly to the United States have been hard at work trying to bring Somalia and both North and South Yemen over being managed by Sudanese President Ni- The savings are considered significant in melry, seems to be progressing promisingly.

(1) That the United States would persuade trying to open a line of communication to Cam- It is pleasant indeed to have Egypt "on our Israel to give up most of the territory taken bodia, so far without success. But much could side." For the moment at least it means that from Egypt, Syria and Jordan during the 1967 change in Southeast Asia now, with India at Moscow no longer enjoys use of a single naval war, and (2) that American economic aid to least momentarily moving away from the So- base anywhere inside the Mediterranean, But the Western alignment of Egypt is based on solve Egypt's rangent economic problems.

The last previous important such switch was two expectations which are in danger of being investigation in a condition is at least as bad litical units and agents. Several other switches the Western alignment of Egypt is based on two expectations which are in danger of being two expectations which are in danger of the expectation which are in danger of the expe seem to be in the making right now. The on what he took to be two promises by former

Lighter cars urged

Special to The Christian Science Monitor

Austin, Texas A team of researchers at the University of Texas Graduate School of Business has found to the American side of the big power street, that trimining the weight of U.S. cars to 2,500 Since Somalia and the two Yemens control the pounds would save 1.1 million barrels of oil a passage from the Indian Ocean to the Red Sea. day by 1981. Lighter cars would also reduce an-Washington would gain an important military mual steel usage by 10 billion pounds a year, advantage from this change. The operation, and aluminum by 632 million pounds annually.

light of the fact that automobiles account for However, in this new and more flexible 28 percent - or 4.5 million barrels a day - of world nothing is final about such associations. U.S. daily oil consumption. Servan-Schreiber again

New French financial daily in the works

By Philip W. Whiteomb Special correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

The sale by Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber to Jimmy Goldsmith of a 45 percent interest in the Paris Express publishing group give France both a new possibility and a certainty.

The possibility is that France will have a daily financial publication parallel to Britain's Financial Times, Germany's Handelsblatt, Denmark's Borsen, and New York's Wall Street Journal. An "economic daily" is an official objective of the new publishing com-

The certainty is that Jimmy Goldsmith, a well-known business magnate with Anglo-French double nationality, has added an Anglo-French press section to his extensive collection of industrial-commercial-financial interests.

The facts surrounding the sale are simple

Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber, a member of the French Parliament, is president of the regional council of Lorraine. He is also one of the leaders of what's left of the Radical Party. A few weeks ago he was assigned the task, by President Giscard d'Estaing, of evaluating the most needed reforms in France today.

Much of the present power of JJ-SS, as he is called, comes from his startling success in founding and developing a French news weekly - the Express. The publication has a present circulation of 550,000 and a group revenue, including the Jouve printing plant, Didot Bottin and Firmin Didot, of about $35 million a year.

Jimmy Goldsmith is far more complicated. Less than 10 years ago he began combining and organizing French and British companies in startling conglomerations.

Mr. Goldsmith converted an old French company in 1970 into a kaleidoscopic holding company, Generale Occidentale. But now it embraces food processors, pharmaceutical houses, a bank, finance houses, and an insur-

Through Cavenham Company, it controls Generale Alimentaire which is comprised of so many enterprises - one of them is Lipton Tea - that today in Europe only the two multinational glants, Unilever and Nestlé, surpass it.

Generale Occidentale owns 51 percent of Cavenham, which owns 98 percent of Generale Allmentaire. The revenue of the group, in France, Britain, and nine other countries, including both the U.S. and South Africa, is estimated at more than $3 billion per year.

France does have two economic dailies, Les Echos, founded by another branch of the Servan-Schreiber family, and Le Nouveau Journal, a conservative evening paper. Both have circulations of about 50,000. Les Echos is read almost entirely by small-business men and Le Nouveau Journal by those interested in finance. There is still room for another.

North Sea oil flowing

By the end of 1977 Britain will be producing half of its domestic oil needs from the new North Sea fields. This is the prediction of Energy Secretary Wedgwood Benn. This will rank the Brilish Isles in position No. 10 as a world oil producer.

"ilardly a shocker to OPEC," he says, "but something that will make a substantial difference la Britain's near-future economy."

in the Feb. 21, 1977 edition, an article on the World Bank loan to Yugoslavia carried an in-correct headling: "World Bank to lend Albania $56 million." The loan was intact to Yugoslavia to help finance development in the mainly Albanian populated Yugoslav province of Kosovo.

America wastes while third world wants

(Mr. Howe is a senior fellow at the Overseas Development Council, a private, nonprofit research and public education body devoted to considering the relationship between the United States and third world countries.)

> By James W. Howe Special to The Christian Science Monitor

Every year 220 million Americans waste more energy than is purchased by the 3 billion people in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. We waste it by letting it escape without benefitting ourselves - through poor industrial processes, and through lighting, heating, and cooling unused and uninsulated areas.

Meanwhile, a typical farmer in the third world lives out his life using only his own muscles, animal draft power, the sun to dry his crops, and a dwindling supply of wood or dung to cook his meal (totalling in all perhaps 15,000 calories a day). The average American suburbanite uses three times that much energy merely driving his car to work.

For Americans the energy crisis means inconvenience or even mild hardship: temporary layoffs, forced car-pooling, or lowering ther-

Prospects not good

For the third-world farmer it may be a matter of life or death. Without more energy there will be no increase in food production, a sobering prospect for one who lives close to starvation; there will be no relief from the many hours of backbreaking labor (mostly female) of hauling wood to cook supper or water to drink, or hand-pounding grain into the coarse grass -- anything to cook his daily meal.

prospects are not much better. Consumption of oil and gas went up dramatically in the decade ending in 1974, but now crippling oil prices are slowing modernization.

Unable to afford oil, running out of wood, and, except in a few places, without much coal, a disquieting number of third-world countries are driven to the conclusion that their only alternative is nuclear energy.

But the nuclear choice promises staggering problems of costs, complexity, foreign dependency, international regulations, dwindling fuel availabilities, and environmental hazards to countries that so choose. It also alarms all people who fear the spread of nuclear weapons made possible by the diffusion of nuclear tech-

In such a dilemma it may make sense for many third-world countries to turn to renewable energy forms, such as sunshine, wind, flowing water, and organic wastes.

In the United States there is a surge of interest in such small-scale renewable energy. This is an appealing, if somewhat romantic, idea the need for which is not yet widely accepted given the established and, on the whole, oulte successful nature of our electric, gas, and petroleum networks.

In the rural third world there are no such networks and none expected soon. If decentralized and renewable energy does not work, the rural third world will be a long time without

Technology exists

2010 A014 027318 1169 2335 015889 A797 9580 055200 19970 135910

Source: First National Bank of Boston, Boston

Foreign exchange cross-rates

By reading across this table of last Tuesday's mid-day inter-bank foreign exchange rates, one can find the value of the ma-jor currencies in the national currencies of each of the following financial centers. These rates do not take into account bank

British W. German French Pound Mark Franc

The following are U.S. dollar values only: Argentine peso: .00311; Australian dollar: 1.1050; Danish krone: .1711; Italian Ilra: .001127; Japanese yen: .003820; New Zealand dollar: .9830; South African rand: 1.1519.

1.7192 A180 - 2437

4.1031

service charges. (c) = commercial rate.

But already an array of proven technology exists, and more is emerging from the laboratory. This technology could pump, grind, light, meal that is his staple; and there will be no free renewable forms of energy found in abunstopping the relentless toll of erosion and dance in many third-world rural villages. It spread of the desert that results from his desperate foraging for wood, twigs, dung, and could be used to improve life in rural areas pay for it all. and as experience is gained, some of it may For the urban dweller of the third world the soon be ready for large-scale urban use.

For example, the Gelebs, a remote Ethioairdrop as recently as 1974. Now, they grow Crete and built with the help of the American Presbyterian Mission in Ethiopia.

tate to trade proven nuclear technology. on which decisions must be made soon to have electricity by 1990, for this unproven new technology. They must develop a conviction that it can work, and that can only be based on actual experience with the new technology.

Resources lacking

There are many institutions in the third world eager to undertake renewable energy re search — more than 30 even in sub-Saharan Alrica. But they lack the resources to do so.

tries, including the international organizations. should be working with these institutions to

There should be tests of small-scale renewablo-energy hardware in scores of villages in Africa, Asia, and Latin America – tests from which the entire world could learn much and which would help third-world policymakers judge whether and how to use this emerging technology to meet an energy crisis of he deeper human proportions than any we are likely to encounter in the U.S.

This would not only help to head off maclear

pian tribe, has always lived on the edge of starvation and escaped famine only through m several good crops a year on land irrigated by windmills patterned after those on the island of

However, third world policymakers will hesi-

The U.S. and the other industrialized coasprovide them with funds and technical assis-proliferation, it would also stretch our own to search dollars since it is cheaper to participate in a global network of research - learning from every breakthrough anywhere is the sand tem — than to conduct our research alone and

Going back Barbados

By James Nelson Goodsell Latin America correspondent of The Christian Science Monitor

Bridgetown, Barbados One might as well get used to a new spelling for the word "charm." In the Caribbean, at

For when I think of charm and the Caribbean, I automatically think of Barbados; this sunny, easternmost of West Indian islands. I'm unashamedly a Barbados enthusiast.

There are plenty of reasons: the English atmosphere that pervades so much of Island-life: the endless miles of beaches that are among the best in the world; the variety of accommodations from quaint rooming houses to tasteful modern high-rise hotels; and the local dishes, including tropical fruit and such seafoods as

But the best reason of all is the Bajan himself or herself.

He or she is a relaxed, courteous, friendly, and happy individual who genuinely enjoys playing host to the visitor. Maybe that is why a quarter of a million tourists come here each year from the United States, Canada, and Great Britain.

The quarter of a million Bajans, give or take a thousand or so, are obviously pleased with their island and want the visitor to get the same impression.

Don't change It!

But don't go trying to change it. A popular local song tells the visitor: "Don't try to change us or rearrange us. We like sim-

Yet the island is changing, like many of its neighboring Caribbean islands. The difference perhaps is that the change here is less offensive. Still, Barbados bustles. The island's quarler of a million people are busy, crowded as they are into a pear-shaped island 21 miles long and 14 wide at its widest point.

Actually, it is one of the world's most densely populated islands. Some Bajans say they expect it to sink into the ocean like an overcrowded ship!

It won't, of course, and there is still room to be alone, although once you get to know the Bajan, you will probably want to spend more lime with him. You will find Bajan hospitality in the hotels, restaurants, and shops. But a betier way to experience it is to get out and mingle with the Bajan in his work and play.

I remember a glorious day of mingling in a cane field, at a sugar mill, in a grocery store, on a beach, and at a fish market. There were four of us and our driver, a genial soft-spoken Bajan whose African ancestors were brought as slaves to this part of the world 300 years

He made sure we came to understand a little of Bajan philosophy. "I've been to other islands, but it's here where I am drawn because there is rest and peace here. It is a simple life," he went on, "and we like it that way. A Pie life of friends, both old and new."

You will find much the same attitude wherish, slightly formal atmosphere of the Sandy

IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK MAGAZINE SAYS, "THE GORHAM

is a one of a kind hotel ... Recommended by AMERICAN AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION,

MOBIL TRAVEL GUIDE and T.W.A.'s "GUIDE

BUDGET RATES

LUXURY AREA

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE READING ROOM NEARBY REDUCED RATE PARKING ADJACENT

COMPLETELY EQUIPPED KITCHENETTES

RCA COLOR IV IN EVERY ROOM

100% AIR CONDITIONED

where to go ?

read the ada on the lravel pages of the Monitor

story Barbados Hilton, or the sprawling Sam

Actually, any of these three or a dozen other hotels, mostly on the southern half of the island, are among the best hostelries in the Ca-

Lane Hotel, the more Americanized, multi-

Sam Lord's Castle, by the way, spreads out from a mansion that Sam Lord, a notorious 19th-century rogue, built on the eastern, or Atlantic, side of the island in the 1830s. Take time, whether you stay at this hotel, now run by Marriott's, or go elsewhere to visit the mansion itself with its sliding panels, defensive doors, and period furniture brought over from

The Hilton is something else - with its inner courtyard dripping with ferns and tropical plants, its almost endless variety of sporting activities with perhaps the best pool on the island. But with the beach right at hand, who wants to spend all his time in a pool? Try out a

Barbados does bustle in spots but there is still plenty of space to do nothing at all

And as for the Sandy Lane, its rather slow The Bajan will probably bring along a lot of Something different But once you have enjoyed that hotel for a day or so, do get away from it. Try out a coffee house on Trafalgar Square (that's right. it's not just London that has such a square) in downtown Bridgetown and watch the Bajans jan song go: go by. Some may well stop and talk and that's when the mingling really begins.

You might even get an invitation to come around for supper. But if you do, be sure to bring at least some of the food for after all the Bajan with all his charm and friendliness is not back many times.

bicycle ride from the hotel to some of the wealthy. There are a number of delicatessens nearby 19th and early 20th-century buildings, where you could pick up a main course of say, which put up when this was a British flying fish to be cooked later over an open

trave

pace holds a strong appeal. Nothing is hurried, other delicacies from the varied fruits of the whether it is a meal, a bit of "sea bathing," as island, to some of its root crops. There is likely lying on a beach is called here, or a game of to be a soup course as well; a spinach-like ingredient is one of the favorites.

But even if you do not get an invitation to a nome, get to know the Bajan and his thinking. You will be hooked on his charm and his attitude toward life .

And, perhaps, as the words of a popular B

"Come back to my Barbados, Come back to my island and me Please come back . . .

You'll find rest and peace in Barbados." I have followed that advice and come

Time lingers in Tunisia's Roman ruins

By Guy Anselmo Jr. The Christian Science Monitor tourists in Tunisla.

But those who make the 70 mile trip from by you stay - whether it is the rather Brit Tunis can still find well-preserved classical

The Homely and Friendly Atmosphere

ALPENROSE

Hotel open May 14 to September 25

Full Board per person per day:

May, June and September

SFr.42. /48. · without bath

$Fr.52.-/68. - with ball

July and August

SFr.45./50. without bath SFr.58./68. with bath

Family von Allmen

CH-3823 Wengen, Switzerland

Telephone 036/55 32 16

Telex 32893 ch alrow

HOTEL

GORHAM

136 West 55th Street New York, N.Y. 10019

Tel. (312) 477-42

🤚 🏴 Thai Travel 🥵

International Inc.

architects and their Roman patrons.

repositional plain which ends abruptly at the fire rules promise to keep archaeologists bus Teboursouk Mountains, Dougga — called for years to come. "Thugga" by the Romans - was the best of Notable also are the public baths and the-ministered by a Roman governor.

sical scholars and archaeologists. wide ceremonial stairway leads into a fover- of politics, learning, and living.

(his consort), and Minerva (goddess of the modern-day theatergoers.

ruins that stand as monuments to their Greek handicrafts and politico-civic being).

From the Capitol's entrance, the visitor has The Roman Empire flourished widely in a commanding view of the forum and the mar-Dougga, Tunisia
Once an important center of the Roman Empire

Once an important center of the Roman Empire

North Africa and left behind cities which today await further probing by archaeologists and historians. Situated 1,800 feet above a fertile

The Roman Empire Hourished widely in Cellum (marketplace), and can see a wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see a wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marketplace), and can see as wide pandors or cellum (marke

> the several wealthy Roman cities grouped ater. Built 168-169 A.D., the theater has an imwithin the "proconsular province," an area adcrowds to the annual Dougga Festival, held The Romans cannot claim sole credit for each June. A bold statement of Roman plan-Dougga's importance, for even under earlier ning, this cultural center illustrates a keen un-Punic domination rapid growth and prosperity derstanding of the practical movement of had been its hallmarks. But the city's great: people. Clever arrangements for the changing ness was largely Roman inspired, and it is that; of sets and the prompting of actors demonempire that is best remembered today by class strate that modern theater design often looks to Roman influences:

Dougga's well-preserved Capitol, designed by Following the decline of Dougga's Roman Marcus Aurellus, is impressive for its Corinthia period, life became more violent as Christians, an columns, capped by a portico featuring at taking over in 350 A.D., destroyed many stone Roman eagle. Built by Greek architects during symbols of paganism. The Vandals in 480 A.D. the period 166-167 A.D., from marble and lime- and the Byzantines in the sixth century helped stone quarried nearby, an impressive 40-foot- to further demallsh this once-supreme center like area distinguished by three massive niches. But today Dougga still "rises" from the where statues of the religious gods once stood. plains with a certain majesty. Acanthus leaves. The center of the city's political life, it was of Corinthian columns romain sharply defined, dedicated to the "supreme political triad of charlof wheel marks are visible on street delities." Tipiter (god of the heavers), Juno stones, and Roman theater tiers still welcome

3

arts/books

A master conductor shows how it's done

Berlin's von Karajan with U.S. students

By Joseph Deitch

with silvery hair, decisive movements, and falled."

Although be did not play an Instrument and seemed lost among the students - mostly in their 20s and late teens - he was easily the dominant presence in the rehearsal room. Juilliard faculty and other students stood or sat along the walls - all eyes (and especially ears) directed at him.

This was one of three special Juilliard classes for young conductors, and Herbert von Karajan, conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic, was the guest teacher, following a series of New York concerts last fall.

From supremacy on the stage of Carnegie Hall and the New York music scene, Mr. von Karajan sat among the students of the Juilliard orchestra - next, in fact, to youngsters from ingly at him. Long Island, New Jersey, Westchester County, Brooklyn, and other uncosmopolitan places. As each student-conductor performed. Mr. von Juilliard pre-college orchestra, took on the Karajan stood up to explain, encourage, chal- Stravinsky. Mr. von Karajan stopped him early tenge, praise, and even to gently scold and interact with them in many ways.

Ho interpreted the music by clapping out the rbythm and singing phrases in a flat baritone. He philosophized about conducting by calling for minimal motion and for more faith in orchestra members to do the right thing by

"After all." he said, spreading his arms around the room, "they can see fortissimo or pianissimo on the score as well as you can."

He mimicked mistakes in hand movements and demonstrated the correct gestures. Other his own, the orchestra assuming something of times, he carried on dialogues, disagreed with one student-conductor's response, and accepted a well-reasoned point from another there were formal conducting classes in his ("he's not all that autocratic." the latter said

All the student-conductors agreed with Mr. von Karajan's conviction that the greater the cause we had no teacher, although an oboe music, the more it can be subject to different interpretations. And giving a piece the needed speed is not always a matter of conducting agility and total discipline.

Most of the students at the podium had some professional conducting experience. Victoria suit, handled the orchestra with cool authority.

Perhaps aware of significant potential. Mr. von Karajan guided her with extra intensity.

"I got an extraordinary concept of sound from him, and he explained how to put it in operation," Miss Bond said. "For him, technique is dispensable. One conductor's technique is New York certainly not applicable to another. He illus-The Juilliard School Symphony Orchestra trated this by telling me that Mr. Furtwangler had a new member at rehearsals not long ago. had long arms, which worked well for his body. He sat near the podium — a short, slight man When anyone else tried his technique, it

> From his seat, Mr. von Karajan vigorously reacted to another student's conducting, then went to the podium and watched his hands, all the while offering analyses and suggestions. "Attitude is important - let them alone, let them play," he said, waving to the orchestra.

He returned to his chair and stared hard at the floor, chin in hand. "Yah!" he said, listening and nodding - "that's it exactly." He rose again and addressed the violinists. "It would be a good idea to move the bow just enough to keep the vibrato. No, no -- you must go down in one beat," he said, accenting each word with a handclap. The cellos and double-basses made a booming entry and the conductor of the Berlin Philharmonic put his fingers in his ears. The student-conductor signalled for a softer tone. Mr. von Karajan glanced approv-

"Who wants to do "The Rite of Spring"?" he asked. Myun Whun Chung, conductor of the on with references to 6/8 and 7/8 time and. generally, to the tricky arithmetic in the tempos in this work. He hammered out the needed rhythms with his arms as the student resumed conducting, combining his and Mr. von Karajan's ideas.

Then the guest conductor plunged toward the podium, both forefingers waving. "The first beat in this measure is primary – it is the pattern for all that follows," he told the student, who agreed and began again. "Good," he said as Mr. Chung moved out expansively on the silken tone of the Berlin Philharmonic.

During a break, I asked Mr. von Karaian if student years in Vienna. "There were - we had 27 students in my class, and two survived, myself and another fellow. Maybe it was beplayer, who fancled himself a conductor, got up and went through the motions."

Peter Mennin, Juilliard's tall, courtly president, was asked about the value of Mr. von Karajan's visit to the rehearsal room. "He's a born teacher. His points of view were ex-Bond, a petite young woman in a black pants tremely important for our students' professional development."

Advice for investors

don; Widenfeld & Nicolson, £5.25.

Watch it! That is the warning of a British financial journalist who squints suspiciously at sandbars and other traps in the Wall Street correspondent for the Financial Times and well, maybe the truth is that you are a very now edits the British business magazine Man- well dressed investor indeed." agement Today, maintains that "Fallure is a

The Naked Investor, by Robert Heller. New better teacher than success." His words of York: Delacorte Press. 250 pp. $8.95. Lon- caution on the numerous self-deceptions of investors provide useful defensive armament.

He counsels the individual investor: "You want information on which you can form your own judgments, not tips that are substitutes for your own decisions. . . . The rich rewards go to those who are unconventionally wise. If the conventional ones [professional money Robert Heller, who was once a United States managers] tell you that you're being foolish -

ORDER TICKETS BY MAIL PULITZER PRIZE FOR DRAMA 1976 WRONER OF 9 TORY AWARDS especially BEST MUSICAL 1976 New York Statements Festival presents

A CHORUS LINE
Hew York: Student Theatre
Les Angeles; Student Theatre
Leades: Drury Lase Theatre

MONITOR THEATERGOERS

Awaken a new interest in nature for your children or grandchildren . . . with this little book written by Kethy (at age 13) and illustrated by Laurie (at 12) Ozenghar, Frank-lin's forest adventures lockude nature facts and attr a child's curiosity. Give a fresh look at the wonders of spring to someone in your lamity!

"Franklin, the flat-footed fly"

$2.95 Pius 60¢ haridiina. GaRi, res. add 6% tsx A-I Audio & Book Productions P.O. Box 1116 Yucoa Valley, CA 92284

think first of monitor advertisers

Herbert von Karajan with the Berlin Philharmonic

share gladness

BIBLE STUDY / INSPIRATIONAL BOOKS

Abingdon Bible Handbook $15.95 SPECIAL $13.50 Interpreter's One Volume Commentary, Abingdon $17.50 Amplified Bible — reveals clearer meanings of original texts $14.95

The Bible - J. Moffatt Translation $14.95 Harper's Topical Concordance pb $8.95 Strong's Exhaustive Concordance Indexed $18.95 pb $9.95

Everyone in the Bible (Biographies), Parker $7.95 SPECIAL $6.95 NEW: Interpreter's Supplementary Volume to the 4-Volume Bible Dictionary $17.95

Smith's Bible Dictionary $7.95 Mister God, This is Anna pb $1.75 The Healings of the Bible—N. Woods pb $1.95

☐ Greatest Thing in the World, Zaremba Record or cassette $5.95 God is My Shephera, Dr. Richard Ozer John Porter, Soloist Record or cassette $5.95

Bob Moline Vocals — John Zaremba Narration
Man's Got to Keep Reachin' record or cassette $5.95 You Are Now record or cassette $5.95

Of Sound's Mysterious Powers and Richest Gifts, Richard Cunningham, Organist, Record only $5.95

] Stranger of Gaillee — Kenny Baker, Record only $5.95

] Teach Me To Love — Kenny Baker, Record only $5.95

Open Monday through Saturday 10-5.

206 S. First Avenue, Arcadia, CA 91006 Tel. 213 445-1634

order form

Getting Better Acquainted with the Bible — Shotwell Paperback 12.50; Hardback $21.50 SPECIAL 19.50 Four Version New Testament (KJV, RSV, Phillips, NEB) $6.95 SPEC. $5.95 Subject Guide to Bible Stories — Garland $15.00

Holy Bible KJV, Large print (6 x 81/2) pb. $9.95 SPECIAL $8.75

Josephus, Whiston pb $9.95 SPECIAL $7.95 Paperback Cruden's Complete Concordance $2.95

Original Meaning of Scriptural Names — Bates $6.00

The Teaching of the Master Jesus' sayings arranged by topic pb $4.00

Topic and Crown, Beasley, pb $6.95

Mary Baker Eddy, A Biography, Beasley $5.95 SPECIAL $3.95

Student's Reference Dictionary (Reprint from Webster's) $14.50

Land Of the Bible — Gibson (Historical facts) $3.95 SPECIAL $2.95

1.38

Love Is the Way — Bob Moline record or cassette $5.95
Of Sound's Mysterious Powers and Richart Office

some of the permanent exhibits looking at real fish to see what they had just learned from the

When a killer whale goes to school everybody pays attention

Since I was going to be in Orlando. I wrote to both Disney World and Sea World to ask if they had special programs for school groups. poises have been trained to show us how they Disney World did not. Sea World sent an ex- communicate. citing packet of material and urged me to be on hand for the first school show at 10:30 a.m. Some fourth and fifth graders, the coordinator of education at Sea World, Bill Clifton, and is how he locates them, it being too dark under I were on time for the first "sound and light" water to see well enough. With a special mishow. The theme that week was based around how sea animals communicate with each other and what sounds they make under water. In what is usually an adult entertainment show building, we got an educational show located the rings but returned them to the

which was both informative and entertaining. trainer on his nose. Three rear-view projection screens gave a The underwater microphone was marvelous; blended slide show backgrounded by a sound it picked up the sounds made by both the man voice explanations.

School at Sea World

By Cynthia Parsons Education editor of

The Christian Science Monitor

ing, and even more informative. The children the sound system. The children, of course, were were extremely attentive, and I learned that enthralled. fish have nerves extending nearly the length of was that they did record sound.

corted tour of Sea World, the schoolchildren, selves for shots and Bill Clifton used a fast-de-

This young woman is a Christian Science nurse.

Up to high standards.

trust in God that heats.

Nurses Training, C13

Through her daily prayerful study to know God better.

in Christian Science nursing, she has chosen a career must meet challenges quickly, yet always keep her work demonstrating — and helping others demonstrate — the

If you'd like to consider nursing as a career, look into our Training Program for Christian Science Nurses.

For information, write to either of the following:

Christian Science Center, Boston, MA, U.S.A. 02116

keep up with monitor ads

Department of Care, Committee for Europe

The First Church of Christ, Scientist

108 Palace Gardens Terrace

LONDON, ENGLAND W8 4RT

Financial aid information available

But she can rest in the certainty that her efforts are changing the world for the better, and that she is the maintains that spiritual joy which uplifts each patient

Orlando, Florida slides and the taped lecture.

Then we all met again in the huge amphitheater where the killer whale and the por-

In the slide show we had seen how a porhit an object and reverberate back to him, that crophone placed in the water (so that we could hear the sounds), and with a trainer throwing plastic hoops in the water, we watched as the porpoise sound system worked and he not only system combining sea animal sounds and hu- whale and the porpoises. Any skepticism on even the most curious child's part had to be The program was fast-paced, very entertain- dissipated by what was boomed out through

The finale for that show was a bit of their bodies which carry sounds. I knew al- schmaltz - on signal the killer whale came up ready that sea animals didn't have ears, but out of the water and planted a kiss on the I'd never really understood before just how it cheek of the trembling (but game) young fourth-grade teacher.

While Bill Clifton gave me a personally es- The children with cameras positioned them-

If I had come another week, I would have been treated to one of two other educational themes. One focuses on animal behavior and training; the other on animal adaptations to different age groups. Mondays and Fridays are for junior and senior high school students, and the material provided is geared to their more advanced interest.

I was most interested when Bill Clifton told me that almost all the impetus of what Sea World would teach had had to come from the Sea World employees. "We want to work with the teachers," he explained, "but they just never come to us with suggestions."

I asked about biology teachers or high schools which taught some type of oceanography. He shook his head in the negative. And discussed, rather sadly, the fact that so little innovation and creativity seemed to be coming out of the schools.

The education staff at Sea World is also available for college students, individually or in groups. They will work out any type of program that they can, and will let these older students explore some of the career jobs assoclated with the running of this combination amusement, research, and educational park.

Sea World was recently purchased by Harcourt, Brace, Jovanovitch from the Umon Oil ompany. Perhaps now there will be the opportunity for greater coordination between schools and this remarkable marine exhibit, inchaling sharing information with those schools which can't get to Orlando or one of the other iwo Sea Worlds in Ohio and California.

'Shamu' Sea World's killer whale

Schools unshackle Iran's women

The Christian Science Monitor Tehran, Iran

Iran's version of "affirmative action," aimed at freeing women from traditional taboos and at opening doors to occupations that have always been male preserves, has had

A 1975 study by the Women's Organization of documents the modest progress made to date, as well as the attitudes of both men and women that remain to be overcome. Despite some notable examples of women who have made it to the boardroom or to the upper levels of government ministries, their numbers are still token. More important for the future is the fact that the number of women in higher education more than doubled between 1970 and

The Reza Pahlavi Vocational Technical Cen-Iran, called "The Employment of Women." ter went co-ed in the fall of 1975 and now 20 percent of each entering class is made up of

LIBERTY BELL ALPINE TOURS

Climbing School Mountaineering Courses Backpacking Tours Guide Service

IN THE HEART OF THE NORTH CASCADES

WRITE FOR OUR FREE BROCHURE

SUMMER SCHOOL IN OXFORD, ENGLAND July 9-August 20, 1977 Subject: The Renaissance in England

i: The Centre for Medieval and Renalesance Studies Five lectures, one jutorial, two field trips each week. Optional class on Astronomy, Surveying, Geodesy, using authentic instruments. File of Jacalinities provided, ACCREDITED.

Prospectus from: The Principal

THE AMERICAN COLLEGE OF BARCELONA A 2-year college granting the A.A. degree: A cosmopolitan education in Spain's most European city.

Small elasses — Individual attention — easy transfer to US colleges and universities. V.A. approved program — family living plan.

Information: The American College of Barcelona Via Augusta 123, Barcelona 6, SPAIN telephone: 218-4887

WHEN YOU SELECT A SCHOOL

Let the Monday Educa-tion Page of The Christian Science Monitor be your guide Chaose front one of the many outstanding schools advertised on these pages: then let them know. you saw their idvartisement in the Monitor.

French/German

Editorial

Le nouveau chef de l'Inde

A la satisfaction des forces démocraiques du monde entier, un changement mcifique de pouvoir a eu lieu en Inde. Morarji Desai, chef du Parti Janata qui a remporté la majorité des voix au murs des dernières élections parlemenzires, prend la direction du pays mme Premier Ministre. Indira Sandhi, qui a essayé sans succès d'imcoser une autocratie en Inde, a néan-moins quitté le pouvoir, après 11 ans, avec dignité et avec les égards dus au wocessus constitutionnel.

Peut-être que la tâche du nouveau Fremier Ministre peut être le mieux Ecrite dans les paroles du slogan de son adversaire : « Stabilité ou chaos ? » Four la première fois l'opposition du Farti du Congrès a l'occasion de monzer qu'elle est capable de diriger la nation de façon constructive. L'Inde est roujours l'Inde — avec tous les pro-nièmes massifs de pauvreté, l'analphatisme et les divisions sociales que rela implique. M. Desai devra faire en orte que le pays continue à progresser conomiquement, construisant sur les profits honorables faits pendant les leux dernières années, mais le faisant le soutien du peuple.

dans le cadre des institutions et des méthodes démocratiques.

En même temps, M. Desai devra garder le contact avec les immenses masses indiennes qui ont démontré si éloquemment qu'elles se préoccupent effectivement de celui qui les gouverne et de la façon dont elles sont gouvernées. Probablement le facteur qui a fait pencher la balance le plus contre Mme Gandhi a été l'effort qu'elle a fait pour imposer le planning familial par le moyen de la stérilisation forcée. En M. Desai, l'Inde a un chef dont la capacité et la ténacité ont été prouvées. Disciple du Mahatma Gandhi, il a passé un grand nombre d'années en prison pour désobéissance civile. Tout au long des années il a été un critique sévère de M^{me} Gandhi et plus récemment il a subi 19 mois de résidence forcée sans jugement, pour faire ensuite vigoureusement campagne malgré son grand âge. Dans les nombreux postes gouvernementaux qu'il a occupés, il a acquis la réputation d'être un administrateur tenace et capable, bien que ses programmes n'aient pas toujours obtenu parti, cela reste à voir. L'opposition n'a jamais travaillé de concert auparavant et il sera probablement difficile d'unifier ce qui est encore un groupe informe de nationalistes hindous, de partisans traditionnels de Gandhi et d'anticom-munisme de gauche. Il faudra de l'habileté politique ainsi que de l'enthousiasme pour atténuer la confusion et l'incertitude tandis que la fumée de bataille se dissipe.

Entre-temps, l'Occident est naturellement satisfait du déroulement des événements dans la péninsule indienne. Cependant ce serait une erreur de laisser un sentiment d'euphorie l'emporter sur une vision plus sobre et plus réaliste de la position diplomatique de l'Inde. Blen que le nouveau Premier Ministre soit certainement mieux disposé envers les Etats-Unis qu'envers l'Union soviétique, par exemple, on devrait se rap-peler que Mme Gandhi a déjà été désilusionnée par ses liens avec les Soviétiques et a amélioré ses relations avec tions avec l'Occident et œuvrer de ison Washington. Il est probable que la à les placer sur une base solide et stable

Que M. Desai puisse unifier les politique étrangère indienne continuen nombreux éléments qui forment son à être fondée sur le non alignement à être fondée sur le non alignement bien que des associations plus chaleureuses avec l'Occident soient possible

En tout cas, la sagesse devreit prescrire aux Américains, en partieslier, de ne pas se laisser aller à une autre « exaltation excessive » au sulet de l'Inde. On a eu trop tendance à se lancer dans les extrêmes en réagissant à propos de l'Inde — à tomber dans un gouffre de désillusions quand la nation flanche et à sauter de joie quand les choses vont blen. L'histoire enseigne certainement que la voie ascendant du progrès doit avoir des hauts et de bas et l'Inde, elle aussi, en aura sa part. En bref, tandis que l'Occident applasdit à la magnifique démonstration de la force de la démocratie en Inde puisse-t-il garder sa perspective. Les Etats-Unis et d'autres désireront catainement faire tout ce qui est en leur pouvoir pour encourager la politique humaine et démocratique d'un nouver gouvernement. Mais puissent-ils ke ser l'Inde régler la cadence de ses rel-

Beaucoup d'entre nous ont goûté la joie de vivre, ressenti la richesse d'une activité et d'un succès enthousiasmants et ont été ravis d'être simplement eux-mêmes et d'avoir bien réussi. C'est parce que nous avons connu de parellles heures que leur absence est peut-êire si décourageante.

pour une raison ou une autre.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

Evidemment il est facile de dire : Après la pluie le beau temps, ça ira mieux demain, il faut espérer que les choses s'arrangeront. Mais si aujourd'hui n'était que le « demain » d'hier et qu'il ne réponde pas à cet espoir ? Que faire alors ?

Ce qu'il nous faut, c'est la compréhension et non l'optimisme; parce que ce qui élimine les limites de notre liberté de ressentir la joie d'être nous-mêmes, blen portants et heureux, c'est la clarté de la compréhension se traduisant en actions et en situations pratiques.

Compréhension de quoi ? De la réalité spirituelle, de la présence et de l'actualité du bien au-delà des conditions apparentes de l'existence humaine. C'est cette sorte de blen qui est naturelle et spontanée dans l'être individuel, le vôtre comme le mien. Il n'est pas nécessaire d'y travailler; ce n'est pas quelque chose que l'on gagne: il est inhérent, pratique et délectable. Nous en disposons maintenant même. Se référant aux lis des champs, Jésus indiqua de façon charmante la nature de ce bien : « Considérez comment croissent les lis des champs. » Puis il décrivit la manière dont ils croissent : « lis ne travaillent ni ne filent. » Et le résultat : « Salomon même. dans toute sa gloire, n'a pas été vêtu comme l'un d'eux. » '

maine

[This religious article appears in English on the Home Forum page]

Un réconfort présent

Bduction de l'article religieux paraissant en anglais sur la page The Home Foturi |Une traduction trançaise así publice chaque samaine|

La Science Chrétienne adresse un message à tous ceux qui ont un réel besoin de réconfort auquel un simple optimisme n'a pu répondre de façon satisfaisante, ou comme il se doit. Notre compréhension de l'être véritable de l'homme grandit - se développe - sans le travail et le labeur vers des buts humains qui sont la marque du mortel. Notre identité spirituelle, réelle, est dotée d'une beauté, d'une harmonie de l'être, d'une espèce de succès qui dépasse tout ce que le monde peut nous offrir. Bref, l'homme est l'image de Dieu un être qui ne participe nullement de toutes les conditions de l'existence hu-

Mary Baker Eddy, qu'une vision pénétrante des enseignements fondamentaux de Christ Jésus amena à découvrir et à fonder la Science Chrétienne, écrit ceci : « Absolument séparée de la croyance à une existence matérielle et du songe de cette existence, est la Vie divine, qui révèle l'intelligence spirituelle et la conscience de la domination qu'a l'homme sur toute la terre. » *

Cela ne constitue pas un concept ésotérique mais un mode très pratique de compréhension. Les conséquences qui en résul-tent dans notre existence peuvent vaincre le découragement et développer le récon-fort et la paix que nous désirons et dont nous avons besoin.

Dès maintenant, songez-y par rapport à votre propre existence. Le « vous » réel, le véritable moi, est spirituel. Vous êtes le reflet de Dieu, l'image de Son être, icimême et maintenant. Est-ce encore là une image de cet optimisme plaisant ? Non. c'est la vérité que Jésus a enseignée et même plus, qu'il a démontrée. C'est la réalité de l'être et vous pouvez en avoir la preuve, quelque mai à l'aise que vous puis-siez être actuellement.

Faites-en donc vous-même la preuve. Quel que soit le désarroi de vos pensées et le bouleversement de vos affaires, cédez à la compréhension que vous êtes maintenant même la ressemblance de Dieu, que votre véritable identité n'a rien à voir avec aucune de ces pensées de désarroi ou ces bouleversements. Maintenez cette idée et appréciez l'identité, le « vous » qui paraît. Le résultat sera la guérison, ce que certains peuvent définir comme renaître à la vie, toute détresse effacée, joyeux de vous trouver réconforté.

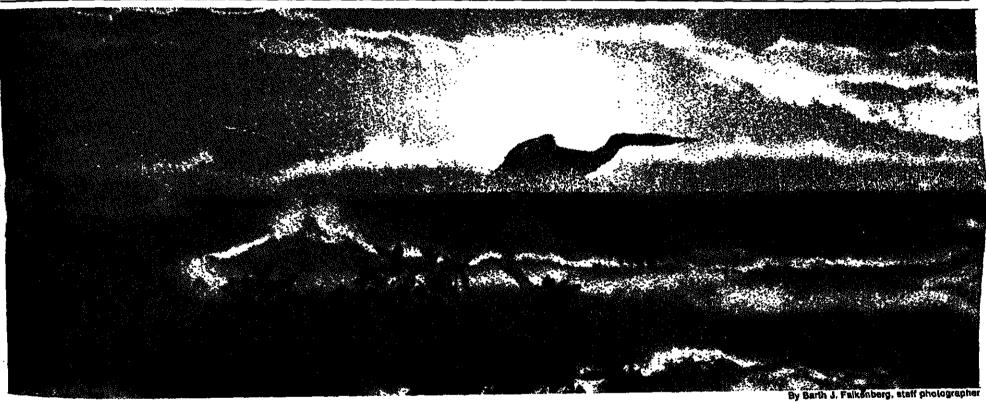

Non pas un simple optimisme, mais l'évidence, ici et maintenant, de la réalité spirituelle de votre être.

'Matthieu 6:28, 29; 'Science et Santé avec la Clef des Ecritures, p. 14.

"Christian Science ("kristlenn "sesennce"

Le traduction française du livre d'élude de la Scionce Chrétienne, « Science el Santé avec la Clef des Ecrituras » de Mary Baker Eddy, existe avec le texte angles en regard. On peut l'achieir dans les Salles de Lecture de la Science Chrétienne, ou le commander à Françes C Carlson, Publisher's Agent, One Norwey Street, Boston, Massachusetts, U.S.A. 02115.

Pour tous renseignements sur les autres publications de la Science Chrétienne en français, écrire à The Christian Science Publishing Society. One Norway Street, Boston, Massachusetts, U.S.A. 02115.

Anhinga on the wing, Everglades, Florida

[This religious article appears in English on the Home Forum page] Übersetzung des auf der Home-Forum-Seite in englisch erscheinenden religiösen Artikals (Eine dautsche Übersetzung erschant wachenliich)

Gegenwärtiger Trost

Viele von uns kennen die Freude am Leben, haben die Begeisterung empfunden, die uns durch anregende Tätigkeit und erben es genossen, erfolgreich wir selbst zu thin this da wir solche Zeiten gekannt ha hen, kann uns eine gegenteilige Lebensinge, in die wir aus dem einen oder anderen Grunde geraten, so sehr entmutigen.

Es ist leicht zu sagen, daß alles nie ganz so schwarz sel, wie es aussieht, daß morgen alles anders sein könne und daß wir us an die Hoffnung auf ein besseres Morgen klammern sollten. Was tun wir jedoch, Benn heute das "Morgen" von gestern ist und die Hoffnungen von gestern sich nicht-

Was wir brauchen, ist nicht Optimismus, sondern Verständnis, denn nur die Klarheit des Verständnisses, in die Praxis umgesetzt, beseitigt alles, was uns daran hinderi, freudig wir selbst zu sein.

Was müssen wir verstehen? Die geistige Wirklichkeit, das Hier und Jetzt des Guten jensells der Scheinzustände des mensch-lichen Daseins. Diese Art des Guten ist in dem individuellen Sein, in Ihrem und mei-nem, etwes Matter. nem, etwas Naturliches und Spontanes.

Man braucht sich nicht darum zu bemühen; es kann nicht verdient werden; es ist uns von Natur aus zu eigen, es ist delle Leistungen zuteil wird, und wir ha- praktisch und bereitet Freude. Wir besitauf die Lillen an: "Schauet die Lillen auf dem Felde, wie sie wachsen." Und dann beschrieb er, wie sie wachsen: "Sie arbelten nicht, auch spinnen sie nicht," Und das Ergebnis? "Ich sage euch, daß auch Salomo in aller seiner Herrlichkeit nicht bekleidet gewesen ist wie derselben eine." Die Christliche Wissenschaft* hat eine Botschaft für diejenigen von uns, die wahrlich des Trostes bedürfen, den uns bloßer Optimismus nicht in richtiger oder befriedigender Weise gebracht hat. Unser Verständnis von dem wirklichen Sein des Menschen wächst - entfaltet sich - ohne die Mühe und Arbelt, menschliche Ziele zu erreichen, die das Merkmal des Sterblichen ist. Unser wirkliches, geistiges Selbst hat eine Schönheit, eine Harmonie des Seins und einen Erfolg, die alles, was die Welt zu bleten hat, übertreffen Kurz, der Mensch ist das Ebenbild Gottes - ein von all den Bedingungen des menschlichen Daseins getrenntes Wesen.

Mary Baker Eddy, deren Einblick in dle grundlegenden Lehren Christi Jesu sie zu ihrer Entdeckung und Gründung der praktisch und bereitet Freude. Wir besit-zen es schon jetzt Jesus deutete die Natur dieses Guten in seinem schönen Hinweis dem Traum des materiellen Lebons ist das göttliche Leben, das geistiges Verständnis und das Bewußtsein von der Herrschaft des Menschen über die ganze Erde offen-

Dies ist keine esoterische Auflassung, sondern ein sehr praktisches Verständnis. Seine Auswirkungen in unserem Leben. können Entmutigung überwinden und uns den Trost und Frieden bringen, die wir ersehnen und brauchen.

Denken Sie einmal darüber nach, was dies ebenjetzt für Ihr eigenes Leben bedeutet. Ihr wirkliches Ich, Ihr wahres Selbst, ist geistig. Sie sind die Wider-spiegelung Gottes, das Etienbild Seines Seins hier und jetzt. Ist das wieder det selbe angenehme Optimismus? Nein. Est mehr als lehrte, nämlich demonstrierte. Es ist die Tatsachilichkeit des Seins und Sie können ca beweisen, ganz gielch, wie untröstlich Sie im Augenblick sein mögen.

Sehen Sie nur selbst. Fügen Sie sich dem Verständnis - ohne Rücksicht auf den Aufruhr in Ihrem Denken und das Durcheinander in Ihren Angelegenheiten -, daß Sie jetzt in diesem Augenblick Gottes Ebenhild sind und deß Ihr wehres Seihst von all jenen Gedanken des Aufruhrs oder jenem Durcheinander getrennt ist. Halten Sie daran fest, freuen Sie sich an Ihrem Selbst, das in Erscheinung tritt. Das Ergebnis, wird Hellung sein, eine neue Lebenszuversicht, ein Freisein von Bedrängnis, die Gewährung echten Trostes.

Dies ist kein bloßer Optimismus, sondern die geistige Wirklichkeit Ihres Seins, die hier und jetzt sichtbar wird.

Motthaus 6:28, 29: Wissenschaft and Gesundneit mit Schlüssel zur Heiligen Schrift, S. 14.

"Ciriedan Scierica (triellen a'siens)

Die deutsche Chersetzung des Lehrbuchs der Christlichen Wilsenschaft "Wissenschaft und Geeundheit mil Schiltest zur Heiligen Schrift" von Mary Bales Eddy, ist "mit dem englischen Text auf der gegenther Regentien Seite erhältlich Zosa Buch kahn in, den Lesszimmerh der Christinher Wissellschaft gekauft werden oder von Frances C. Carlson, Publisher's Agent, Ons. Norwey Street Boeton, Massechusens, USA Q21 5.

Austunkt über endern christlich-wieserschaftliche Schriften in deutscher Sprache ettellt sit Antrage der Verlag.
The Christian Science, Publishering Segraby, One Norway, Street, Boston, Migsechusetts, USA Q2115.

Laissés pour compte ins Hintertreffen geraten Left behind

The Christian Science Monitor

Leitartikel

Indiens neuer Führer

[Dieser Artiket erscheint auf Seite 36 in englischer Sprache.]

Zur Zufriedenheit der demokratischen Kräfte überall hat ein friedlicher Machtwechsel in Indien stattgefunden. Morarji Desai, Vorsitzender der Janata-Partei, die eine Stimmenmehrheit in den jüngsten Parlamentswahlen gewann, übernimmt als Ministerpräsident die Führung des Landes. Indira Gandhi. die vergebens versuchte. Indien eine Autokratie aufzuerlegen, trat trotz allem nach elfjähriger Regierungszeit mit Würde und gebührender Achtung vor dem verfassungsmäßigen Lauf der Dinge zurück.

Die Aufgabe des neuen Ministerpräsidenten könnte vielleicht am besten mit den Worten "Stabilität oder Chaos?", dem Wahlkampfslogan seiner Opposition, beschrieben werden. Zum erstenmal hat die Opposition der Kongreßpartei Gelegenheit, zu beweisen, daß sie imstande ist, das Land erfolgreich zu führen. Indien ist immer noch Indien - mit all den ungeheuren Problemen der Armut, des Analphabetentums und der Klassengegensätze, die es in sich schließt. Desai wird das Land wirtschaftlich vorantreiben und auf den obenswerten Gewinnen der vergangenen zwei Jahre aufbauen müssen, je-doch im Rahmen demokratischer Einichtungen und Methoden.

Gleichzeitig wird Desai mit den großen Massen Indiens Kontakt pflegen müssen, die so beredt zeigten, daß es ihnen nicht gleich ist, wer sie regiert und wie sie regiert werden. Was das Zünglein an der Waage am meisten beeinflußte, war wahrscheinlich die Tatsache, daß Indira Gandhi Familienplanung durch Zwangssterilisation durchzuführen suchte.

Indien hat in Desai einen Führer, der seine Fähigkeiten und seine Ausdauer bewiesen hat. Als Anhänger Mahatma Gandhis hat er wegen Ungehorsams gegen den Staat viele Jahre im Ge-fängnis verbracht. Er war ein scharfer Kritiker Indira Gandhis während ihrer Regierungszeit, und kürzlich stand er ohne ein gerichtliches Verfahren neunzehn Monate unter Hausarrest, worauf er trotz seines Alters einen energischen Wahlkampf führte, In den vielen Regierungsämtern, die er bekleidet hat, war er als zäher und fähiger Verwalter Programme gewann

Ob nun Desai die vielen Gruppen in nerhalb seiner Partei vereinigen kam, bleibt dahingestellt. Die Opposition hat nie zuvor zusammengearbeitet, und es mag sich als keine leichte Aufgabe erweisen, das zu vereinen, was immer noch eine amorphe Gruppe hinduistischer Nationalisten, der Anhänger Gandhis und der antikommunistische Linken ist. Es wird politische Gewandheit und Begeisterung erfordern, um die Verwirrung und Ungewißheit zu mildern, während sich der Staub legt. Indessen freut sich natürlich der Westen über die Entwicklung auf den indischen Subkontinent. Es wäre je doch verkehrt, sich von einem Höchgefühl hinreißen zu lassen, anstall nüchtern und realistisch die diploma-tische Lage Indiens zu betrachten. Wen auch z. B. der neue Ministerpräsiden den Vereinigten Staaten eindeuts freundlichen geginnt ist die der Sofreundlicher gesinnt ist als der Sowjetunion, dürfen wir nicht vergesen, daß Indira Gandhi bereits ihre Verbindungen zur Sowjetunion mit Ernüchtsrung betrachtete und bessere Beziehung gen zu Washington anstrebte. Inden mag sehr wohl weiterhin eine Außen-politik der Neutralität betreiben, obgleich warmere Beziehungen zum Westen möglich wären.

sten möglich wären.
Auf jeden Fall gebietet die Weisbelt, daß vor allem die Amerikaner ich nicht wieder von einem fühl in bezug auf Indien hinreisen sen. Zu oft war man genege Extreme zu verfallen, wenn es um dien ging - men ist bitter enttät wenn das Land in Schwierigkeite gerät, und hoch erfreut, wenn alles glat läuft. Die Geschichte lehrt, daß man auf dem Weschichte lehrt, daß man auf dem Weg des Fortschritts neben dem Gewinn auch Rückschläge eriebt und auch Indien wird seinen Antell davon haben

Kurz, möge der Westen sich seine Perspektive bewahren, während er indiens großartiger Veranschaullehub der Stärke der Demokratie spendet. Gewiß werden die Vereiniges staaten und andere Länder alles und was in ihren Kräften steht um ihr humane und demokratische Politik eine humane und demokratische Politik eine neuen Regierung zu unterstiften. Abt sie sollten Indien in bezug auf sein Beziehungen zum Westen das Tente bestimmen Jahren und an erbeiten bekannt, wenn er auch nicht immer die bestimmen lassen und daran arbeit allgemeins Unterstützung für seine diese auf eine feste unerschützerli Programme gewann Basis zu stellen:

A redress of balance

"La chair est triste, hélas! et j'ai lu tous. les livres." (The flesh is sad, alas, and I've read all the books.) This first line of a poem called "Brise Marine" (Sea Brecze) by the French poet, Stephen Mallarmé, came back to me recently when I was pondering my lost interest in reading.

As a child, a teen-ager, and a college student I read voraciously - but selectively. Novels, short stories, poetry, were the fodder on which I fed exclusively. Literature was my like. I not only majored it but I consumed it, and there never was any question of exchanging fiction for non-fiction, fantasy for

I discovered the Mallarmé while studying for a master's degree in Comparative Literature, an episode in my past which I cannot ever recount without recalling my father's distraught question, "But what can you do with an M.A. in Comparative Literature?" I was taking a course in French symbolist poetry with which I found, to my melancholy delight. I had an even greater affinity than with romantic poetry. Steeped in malaise, ennul, tristesse, etc. I wandered through my little world a very old young person, adopting the saturnine view of life peculiar to that age group, which I suspect is predicated on a creeping awareness that one is approaching the brink of life and is scared to death to leap into it. It is perhaps no coincidence that the symbolists were so preoccupied with "the

It was the second part of the line from Mallarmé that struck me - since in those days I knew very little about the flesh. I felt as if I had read all the books, and knew enough to recognize that literature, like history, does tend to repeat itself. There is a finite number of plots and themes treated in different styles, in different guises, from different points of view. Not that these differences are unimportant - the author's mind is the crucial variable, the unknown quantity, that renews the ancient plot, revives the tired

Never to be told

Hush the mouth, and heed

from sound, from sound.

Seal the eyes, and seek what is only known clean through stone.

such depth of inwardness.

and harder still to share

For ah - how to bring out from cave of flame

inkling of the thing consuming name?

Hard it is to dare

when hearing has been freed

n sight itself can break

what there may come to pass:

Dorls Peel

what is only found

The Home Forum

Courteay of "On Reading" by Andre Kertesz, Viking-Grossman. New York

'Reader, Greenwich Village,' 1963: Photograph by Andre Kertesz

Homecoming

alighting twice

the same, forever

different returning herself sailing out if only because

in mid-air joys

from how they began.

For master of more than is the child who returns - of what she has learned under sun-hung elms,

in the steadfast realms

Rushworth M. Kidder

of stillness, of height.

of cycles of light

one learns from a book only what one is a few months or years and understanding it point there is no substitute for experience. liking it more or less than the first time. The fault, as usual, lies in ourselves, the Rereading proves this nicely. Everyone has

After college I was at a point in my life happening to me all this time.

Diana Lording readers. It gradually becomes apparent that had the experience of rereading a book after where I knew intuitively that books could no

Sun fills the elm

(as children the air

the afternoon long with song) with haze

like a thick rope strong from a limb is swung children through air

outward, they glide

quite to the place

they left, never

gally, arcing

Riding the knot circling, not

ડામ દસંધ વસુ

ready to learn, and that beyond a certain in a way he did not understand it before and longer protect me from the world or pay me with the answers I felt I needed be with it. I think that people who ready ature as avidly as I did in part lade fidence in their ability to thread their through the labyrinth and read book in gently as travelers in a foreign comp maps. The vicarious element is press well. It is easier to pick one's way the the pages of someone clse's life than ton through one's own.

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MORE

After college I began to work and bec an adult, officially at least. But I continue read about life as if I were still studgeth. exams. Books were my old friends, and were safer than the people who might be become new ones. I sensed that the law gist minishing returns had set in, that the los weren't leaching me any more than the L I already knew, but they still offered med illusion of security and the solace of escap

Gradually the reading tapered of -p personal reading, that is, I read a greater for my job, and between that and telespent with people I found I had less the time to read on my own. I felt amous about this. Part of me was filled wor. icty, as if I were falling behind, part do simply missed it, part of me felt relievel

I can't remember the last time I sat novel. It must be six months to a year! shocks me to write that sentence, as It. never have imagined such a situation by possible. Of course it's been an unexbusy year, working and getting married? time alone does not account for it. I actipicked up a novel a few times and by: reading but my attention wandered & how I couldn't get interested. My thes kept returning to my own life.

I don't know quite what to make of the One explanation is that I find my own! more interesting now than any book; it grosses me completely. I am at last h what I read about for all those years at seems to me an appropriate redress of h ance. But at times I worry that I am bees ing duli or anti-intellectual. I glance subj at the shelves of untouched books and spin at the momory of full cartons stored away

My changing attitude toward books see to confirm the cyclical pattern to our lie the seasonal interpretation expounded in E clesiastes, and I cannot help but wonder! and when I will go back to the books In

The Convent of Keghan

When I think of you my heart becomes the convent of Keghart carved out of a hill, out of stone.

Even a murmur achoes 🕮 🖳 A flutter becomes a long stavet of ocean waves whose sound rises, rises into the air from the dark interior until it rings like a distant bell.

My heart, when I think of you, become the convent of Keghart that looks on the outside, like a rock.

Translated from Armenian

On keeping a notebook

Recently, I returned home from work and so much is reduced to chatter, brilliant chattound a small, brown-wrapped parcel awaiting me. Opening it, I realized a woman friend
The history of women's journals is, in of mine had sent me her diary.

Perhaps I should qualify this by saying she for thwarted or unpalatable experiences. In unpublished. this case, then, my friend sent me her jour-

This lengthy log, reflections condensed and culled from a year's experiences, represented the sum of her emotional and intellectual spaces. In essence, it was her testimony of hope and terror.

Now this friend, who for the past few years painter, is someone whom I have known since childhood. Our relationship, now as then, is one formed on an instinctual trust, one which requires little specific knowledge of the other's activities in order to sustain the mutual interest and affection. For this reason, (one I like to think of as a true manifestation of grace between two people) I know very little about her life.

A comment made in a recent interview by the French actress-director Jeanne Moreau about a woman she knows accurately expresses my feelings for my friend, Elisabeth. There's a friend I've known for 19 years and all I know about her private life is what I've heard from others. And yet our relation is very profound; If she dies, I die."

When I discovered that my friend had sent me her journal, my feelings, as one might imagine ranged somewhere between intense exclement and equally intense awe. Simultaneously, I felt the terrible responsibility of being privy to another person's innermost thoughts, as well as a quiet humility in realizing the trust entailed by such an act.

Unlike most people who keep private journals, Elisabeth never falls into the predictable trap of writing to sound intelligent - in other words to be read. Her journal is intelligent because it is honest. For her, the personal is only a very inadequate way of distilling the universal. She is as suspicious of her interpretation of personal experiences as she is of her need to interpret them at all.

Elisabeth's ambivalent reaction to keeping a journal sparked deep-seated suspicions I have harbored about the nature of private jourtals, particularly those of women. Are jourwondered, the pit rather than the flesh cuse, under the guise of trying to find out that we feel, of not having to share those feelings at all? Morever, has this excuse, this emotional privacy, become

The inherent secrecy of journal keeping is impled in the title of a contemporary book alled "Revelations: Diaries of Women." A mapendium of extracts from famous tomen's journals, this book provides a discoming look into the private thoughts penned private women in private rooms. This is the closet as it is of us going in.

is I read these extracts, the one fact comnon to all was the amount of time and there, which had obviously been channeled them. Why, I wondered, not into a novel, a play, or a collection of poems? In journal form, Mme, Sevigne's literary bon mots erely become literary bon bons. In the end, sense, the inverse history of literature itself. Prompted by feelings too powerful to be sent me her journal. Some people would argue it's semantic quibbling, but I've always would any writer, by finding words to diffuse roughly distinguished journals as caches of them. In this case, though, the words and untested expectations and diaries as refuges feelings remained private as they remained

Women's journals, then, became the most important parenthesis in the history of literature. Often they provided others with inspiration. Dorothy Wordsworth's bucolic journal, for example, provided acknowledged poetic inspiration for her brother William's verse. Similarly, Alice James's spacious diary, which widened the crevice of her life. has lived in Paris pursuing her career as a provided excellent literary substance for her brother Henry's spacious novels. Most extreme is the case of the minor French novelist Raymond Radiguet who stole his lover's journal in order to give emotional credibility lo a novel based upon their relationship.

Some women's journals, however, became in themselves great masterpleces when published posthumously. Mary Boykin Chesnut's compelling journal documenting the harrowing effects of slavery in America is more powerful as diary than novel. To fictionalize what she saw would certainly have been historic betrayal. The journals of Lady Nijo, a 13th-century Japanese writer, similarly afford unique insight into the minds and manners of her era.

Most outstanding, perhaps, of the journal-as-art-form is Virginia Woolf's "A Writer's Diary," her literary survival manual and manifesto. Why Woolf's journal is Impressive, through, is precisely because it is an axis around which all her true accomplishments - her novels, essays and reviews - revolve. The great journal, then, is great largely when it acts as a ballast rather than a substitute for other accomplishments.

For the professional diarist, (the most obvious example being Anais Nin with her seven-volume life,) the journal can become a mesmerizing mirror rather than a window. The result becomes lives lived between slimset margins of a notebook, lives lived on the deceptively straight surface of the ruled line. Lives, in Eliot's words, which daren't "disturb the universe."

In her provocative essay, "On Keeping a Notebook," the writer Joan Didion observes, "Keepers of notebooks are rearrangers of deperience's sacred fruit? Are they an exthings." Although this is the impulse and task deflecting great art.

Do not notebooks privately tame and temand thereby think we control them? Are they not safe surrogates against the terror of pos sibly failing in public? Are they not failsafes against the one word never found in journals;

My friend sent me her journal, in part, to relieve herself of her words. The journal, our legacy as women, had value for her only when it became shared. To send me her journal was to relieve herself of the illusion that privacy is possible only when alone. And so, she joined hands, through words, with another woman, who, in turn, has rendered the experience into print.

Perhaps, one day, we'll not need our words at all, and, in Elisabeth's phrase, find other ways of "educating the heart."

The Monitor's religious article

Comfort now

Many of us have tasted joy in living, felt the exuberance of spirited activity and acfor one reason or another, can so discourage you are at the moment.

standing, translated into practical action and tress, the need for comfort answered happily. events, that removes the limitations on our Not mere optimism, but the spiritual realfreedom to enjoy being ourselves happily and ity of your being made evident here and now.

ity, of the hereness and nowness of good Key to the Scriptures, p. 14. beyond the apparent conditions of human experience. It is the kind of good that is natural and spontaneous in individual being, in your being and mine. It does not have to be worked for; it cannot be earned; it is inherent, practical, and enjoyable. We have it now. Jesus indicated its nature in his beautiful reference to the lilies, "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow." Then he described how they grow: "They toll not, neither do they spin." And the end result? "Even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."*

Christian Science has a message for those of us who have a real need for comfort that mere optimism has not answered properly or satisfactorily. Our understanding of man's real being grows - develops - without the toll and the working toward human goals that mark the mortal. Our real, spiritual selfhood has a beauty, a harmony of being, a kind of success that surpasses anything the world can offer. Man is, in short, the image of God – a being apart from all the conditions of human experience.

Mary Baker Eddy, whose insight into the fundamental teachings of Christ Jesus led to her discovering and founding Christian Science, writes, "Entirely separate from the belief and dream of material living, is the Life divine, revealing spiritual understanding and the consciousness of man's dominion over the whole earth."

This is no esoteric concept but a very practical way of understanding. Its consequences in our lives can overwhelm discouragement and develop the comfort and peace we want and need.

Think of it in relation to your own life right now. The real you, the genuine self, is spiritual. You are the reflection of God, imaging

BIBLE VERSE

Give unto the Lord, O ye mighty, give unto the Lord glory and Psalms 29:1

A little matter

With dishes shiring on the shelf, And the hearth swept clean and burnished, And the tea kettle drowsing slow, I rested on a spread of sun Like silk of gold across my bed. And I felt the creature comforts As the still, small joys of caring By which each day is tucked away Into infinity with grace.

Mary Roelofa Stoti

complishment, and relished just being our- Jesus taught, and more than taught - demonselves in a successful way. It is because we strated. It is the actuality of being, and you have known such times that the lack of them, can prove it, no matter how discomforted

Just see for yourself. Regardless of the It is easy to say, yes, every cloud has its turmoil of your thought and the disruptions of silver lining, and tomorrow will be a better your affairs, yield to the understanding that day, and we should hang on in hope of a you - right now - are God's likeness, that brighter tomorrow. But what if today is the your true selfhood is apart from any of those "tomorrow" of yesterday and has not ful- thoughts in turmoil or those disruptions. Hold filled yesterday's hope? Then what do we do? to this, enjoy the self, the you, that appears. Our need is not for optimism but for under- The result will be healing, what some might standing - because it is the clarity of under- call a new lease on life, a freedom from dis-

Understanding of what? Of spiritual real- *Matthew 6:28, 29; Science and Health with

The healing touch of God's love

In the Bible God promises, "I will restore health unto thee, and I will heal thee of thy wounds."

Are you longing for a greater assurance of God's healing care? Perhaps a fuller and deeper understanding of God may be required of you. A book that can help you is Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy. This is a book that brings to light God's ever-present goodness, His power and His love.

Science and Health speaks of God's steadfastness and His law of healing through prayer. It can show you how a change in your concept of God and man can bring healing and regeneration in your life. It will show you how the Bible's promises are fulfilled.

You can have a paperback copy of this book by sending £1.80 with this coupon.

Miss Frances C. Carlson Publisher's Agent 4-5 Grosvenor Place, 8th Floor, London SWIX 7JII Please send me a paperback copy of Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures. (L)

Enclosed is £1.80 plus 30p to cover postage and handling.

Hua: China's Stalin?

China's breach with the Soviet Union in the personal personality," of "very ordinary state one policy area which we know to have formed reliance on an elite of specialized technics and highly skilled workers who are late 1950s weakened the validity of trying to understand China's political system in terms of the Soviet system. Yet, in the absence of any clear-cut interpretation of the Chinese politics of succession, a case can be made porhaps for returning to the analogy with the U.S.S.R. and raising the possibility that China might now have its own Stalin.

The analogy should not be overdrawn but consider the following:

Hua Kuo-feng's evident consolidation of power before Mao's death, the way he took charge of the eulogy of the departed leader and the symbolic preservation of Mau's remains and ideological legacy, and his surehanded disposal of his rivals for power, the "gang of four." are familiar repetitions of Stalin's assumption of Lenin's mantle. But these events alone cannot be viewed as extremely unusual. Any one of Hua's rivals is likely to have acted in the same way. The more intriguing questions, in seeking parallels between Stalin and Hua Kuo-fong, are what kinds of presuccession careers the two men followed and what policies were of priority to them.

Stalin has been described as being, before lds overt assumption of power, modest, unnoticeable, almost anonymous, a man with an "impersonal personality," of "very ordinary state one pensonal personal personal personality," of "very ordinary state one pensonal personality," of "very ordinary state one pensonal personality," of "very ordinary state one pensonality," of "very ordinary state of continuity in his political career: and highly skilled workers who will make the pensonality of the penso trol without arousing the suspicions of his potential rivals.

From the little we have learned so far about Hua Kuo-feng, much the same descriptions might be applied to his style and career. To Western observers and in all likelihood to his political opponents, the now discredited "gang of four," Hua too was a dark horse. On the matter of political style, Hua's admonition to be "meticulous in organization and direction" could aptly describe, in retrospect, the principles followed by Stalin in his rise to power.

Hua remains a very elusive figure in Chinese politics in terms of policy preferences and ideological orientation, with the exception of a thread of continuity in his posterior thread production in the short run. These dates no longer faces the issue of agricultural collection counter to the egalitarian frents to no longer faces the issue of agricultural conce-tivization which Stalin faced in 1928, a definite have characterized the Maoist phases of a trend is becoming evident in China today in which both industrialization and farm mechanization are taking a top priority position in the continued movement for change, as occurred in the Soviet Union in the late 1920s.

What might be the implications for China if we draw the analogy between the high priority given to economic modernization by Hua today and Stalin's priorities in the Soviet Union of almost half a century ago? It is perhaps unjustified or at least premature to anticipate for China the repressive policies initiated by Stalin during the great purges, although one might keep in mind the fact that Hua Kuo-feng once headed the Ministry of Public Security (the police) and the swiftness with which he arrested the "gang of four."

There is, however, good reason to speculate on the consequences of the high priority given to modernization. Both agricultural mechanization and industrialization (which are linked to a larger process of increasing productivity in agriculture and industry) tend to call for greater order and planning in society and for nese politics in the past few decades to which the less privileged strata of the pa lation were encouraged to participate ap duction decisions and to voice their operation to the clitism of those who were blesselp more authority, more wealth, and more etc. tion and expertise.

It is not unreasonable to speculate to China's egalitarian emphasis will be reser us a consequence of the new priorities, late. the great push for industrialization and aging tural mechanization under Stalin provided justification for the development of a pin leged elite and for the repudiation of the sail tarian ideals of the revolution.

It may not be long before a new perbit Chinese politics is heralded by a resident of Stalin's phrase that only "Leftist bloodies idealize the poor."

Mr. Perrolle is Director of Asian S.: ies at Wheaton College in Massachusta and associate editor of the quarterly gr nal Chinese Law and Government

COMMENTARY

Joseph C. Harsch

Mr. Brezhnev is sensitive - with reason

President Carter's talk about "human rights" has obviously caused pain in Moscow. Leonid Brezhnev does not like it. He has talked back in sharp terms. He has more reason than most persons living west of the river Elbe perhans realize.

The reason, to quote the London Economist.

"Even now, the Russians are on the verge of becoming a minority in the Soviet Union: the other peoples, combined, will overtake them

When Mr. Carter talks about "human rights" violations in the Soviet Union he and most of his Western listeners have in mind primarily some 2.5 million Jews in a total Soviet population which is estimated to be today about 275 million. But the Jews are the second smallest of the many non-Russian ethnic groups who inhabit the Soviet Union. The smallest group are the Tadzhiks at 2.1 million.

Mr. Brezhnev has to worry about a great deal of dissatisfaction among groups of people far more numerous than the Jews. If they were the only dissatisfied people in Mr. Brezhnev's empire he would have relatively little to worry about. The trouble is their complaints can tend to become contagious, and any concessions made to them can give ideas to a lot of other people.

Probably the amount of dissatisfaction inside sians in 1945. They would like to get out from the Soviet Union tends to be exaggerated outside. And even if the Russians by themselves become a minority of the total, there are two other Slavic groups, the Ukrainians at over 40 million and the Byelorussians at about 10 million, who make up a substantial Slavic majority. Taken together the three Slavic groups come to something over 180 million out of the total of probably 275 million. So the time is certainly not in sight when the Slavs will be outnumbered in the Soviet Union. But there are something near a hundred million non-Slavs who cling to their own cultures and their own religions and who dominate the areas in which they live. Russians are a majority of the population only in Great Russia itself. Everywhere else the dominant element is the Moldavian, the Lithuanian, the Uzbek - or whatever it may be. And in all of these other non-Russian areas most of the top jobs are still in the hands of members of the Russian minor-

There are grievances in Mr. Brezhnev's empire. The Jews are among the aggricved, but are a small minority of those aggrieved. Lithuanians, Latvians, and Estonians together number perhaps about five million. Their religion is Christian. They have been subjected to a heavy and relentless Russification program ever since they were resubjugated by the Rusunder Moscow's oppressive hand.

Much more numerous are the Muslim peoples of Central Asia numbering somewhere

These Muslims have the highest birth rate in the Soviet Union. They were subjected to Russian rule recently - much of it within a little over a hundred years. The big Russian push into the Muslim areas of Central Asia began in about 1840 and ended by about 1890. The penples of these lands remember their own rich historic record. Their ancestors once ruled over huge empires of their own. They have

The melting pot has worked imperfectly in the United States, but Americans compared to Soviets are homogeneous. There is no single group of persons inside the United States who would leave it if they could, or set up a separatist state. True, the people of Nantucket, Martha's Vineyard, and the Elizabeth Islands are currently talking of seceding from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. But this has more to do with next summer's tourist season than with serious politics. And even as a game the islanders are not talking about independence from the United States. There is no ratism inside the United States. Hence it is dif- They are vulnerable.

ficult for Americans to appreciate how different things are in the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union is not monolithic. It is not homogeneous. It is an empire in which the members of the largest ethnic group, the Great Russians, dominate a number of smaller ethnic groups. The best is for the Russians.

is there potential disintegration in this sys-

No one is sure of the answer. In Moscow they dismiss the idea as the wild dream of their enemies. But they also are quick to trample on the slightest sign of nationalistic dissidence in any part of their empire. And they cannot regard as friendly any remark by a President of the United States which might have the effect of stirring up unrest among any of the various nationalities.

Mr. Carter insists that there is no linkage between his concern for human rights and his interest in doing business with the Soylets about such things as weapons and trade. But it is difficult for the men in Moscow to regard what has been said already as being anything less than an assault upon the integrity of the Soviet state. It seems highly doubtful that much progress will be made in Soviet-American relations so long as the men of Moscow feel that Mr. Carter whether intentionally or serious unsatisfied nationalism or urge to sepa- not is giving them serious trouble at home.

Jimmy Carter slept here

When Jimmy Carter stayed overnight in Clinton, Massachusetts, he made his own bed. Thus a new example was set for presidential aspirants of all ages, or so parents at least may hope.

Would Richard Nixon have made his own bed? Would even George Washington - who slept practically everywhere - have tidied up his muslins and quiits the morning after? The questions must remain rhetorical, but one's heart seriously doubts it.

Furthermore, we can assume that President Carter. as an old Navy man, made a very good bed. Regulation squared corners. Bottom sheet taut enough for a quarter to dance on. Pillow nicely plumped. Spread failing evenly to the right and left.

One can just hear Mr. Carter at 6:30, or whenever. murmuring to his cool Northern sheets in his warm Southern voice: "For too long political leaders have been isolated from the beds they sleep in. Every bed has its sagging spring, its missing mattress button, its one unsmoothable wrinkle. I come from a little town called Plains, Georgia, and it's full of such beds. I want to know your problems. I don't promise to solve them all, but I'll never lie to you."

Disgruntled Ford-voters will be quick to point out that making the bed was an empty gesture - political showboating. Everybody knows that guest beds get changed. Such a charge will, of course, only sting Carter supporters into sneering personal remarks, like: "Well, old Jerry couldn't even make it around the bed without stumbling over something."

Melvin Maddocks

Before the Great Clinton Bed-Making gets turned into a cheap political issue, it ought to be put in some perspective. We would suggest that here at last, in Carter the bed-maker, is the definition of '70s populism we have all been waiting for the interesting question: What other figures in recent political history would have passed this test? Our answer is Henry Agard Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, Vice-President during Franklin Roosevelt's second term, and a third-party candidate for president Like Mr. Carter, Wallace was a millionaire farmboy.

A populist is a man who makes his own bed. Veteran populist-watchers now may ask themselves

Wallace also identified himself with those that Carter likes to call "citizens without influence." Wallace took off his coat whenever possible. Every word, every gesture of style seemed to say: "I'm not your usual professional politician " Wallace was a man to whose lips the words "rights" and "principles" came as often as they do to Carter's.

All this puzzled Wallace-watchers almost as much as it does Carter-watchers.

Wallace, too, was accused of being fuzzy on the is-

Wallace, too, struck people as being a very tough comnetitor beneath his picty. A fierce tennis player with one of history's first two-handed backhands, Wallace was once quoted as saying: "I suppose it's not very Christian of me, but I do like to win."

The populist puzzles his watchers, and probably himself, with such paradoxes. How can you be a Little Guy and come in first" Abraham Lincoln may be the only totally convincing populist in American history. Would Abraham Lincoln have made his own bed? The question must have passed through Mr. Carter's head as he neatly folded back the top sheet.

For what it's worth, here's our best populist guess. Yes, Abraham Lincoln would have made his own bed. But the results would have been a disaster, and be couldn't help himself, just as Mr. Carter, by contrast, couldn't help making a superb bed, with the words of Admiral Rickover in his car: "Why not the best?"

Henry Wallace, on the other hand, made a pretty fair bed, and then very carefully mussed it up. At least that's our populist story for the day, and we're going to manner of the free press. stick with it.

broadcasting authorities are licking their wounds. After considering more than 7,000 pleces of evidence about their conduct. Lord Annan's Committee on Broadcasting has given them both a caning and told them to do better in future. Especially the prestigious BBC. A minority of the 16 member committee wanted to chop the "Beeb" up - at least into separate radio and television entities. The majurity turned that down in the end; recommending only that the local, low-powered radio stations run by the BBC and commercial interests should be brought together under a new independent body.

Lord Annan's other major recommendation is the setting up of a new public body, called the Open Broadcasting Authority, to operate a fourth channel of television. The idea is apparently to meet the objection that the present three – two BBC and one commercial – do not provide free publishing access to the air in the

The OBA would apparently be relieved of the obligation to preserve scrupulous balance in its programs of opinion. It would draw its matedal from a variety of sources, including the license fees.

London Open University, independent production com-Battered but more or less intact, Britain's panies and producers and its own news service – but no wornout cimena films.

> OBA's money would come from educational grants, advertising, and even direct sponsorship — a new departure for British television.

 A joint program journal — instead of the competing Radio Times (BBC) and TV Times (Commercial).

• A Welsh-speaking TV channel to be created for Wales as soon as possible - a triumph for the nationalists.

 A Broadcasting Complaints Commission to be created to consider all complaints of unfair treatment or misrepresentation. (At present, the broadcasters have their own tribunals.)

 A Public Enquiry Board for Broadcasting. which would hold special public hearings into various aspects of broadcasting - for example, violence or nudity - and would audit the broadcasting bodies' stewardship of the air every seven years.

 Stricter control of "inappropriate" adver tising on the air.

The BBC should continue to be financed by economic recovery.) The Annan Committee was twice created by Harold Wilson's Labour government - and once abolished by intervening Conservatives. There was always a strong feeling among BBC staff that its main purpose was to punish the

After praising the BBC for "having raised

The committee say they have an uneasy

· Less oppressive party political broad- of direction and touchiness." Both sides of the industry had complained of poor coverage of · Dubbed laughter to be forbidden. (All rec- their affairs, in this area, and others, proommendations are subject to Parliament and grams were "patchy, dull and on occasions su-

> The BBC is also criticized for "overkill" on big public occasions - as when it sent 57 staff to cover the "less than gripping" Democratic Party convention in New York, BBC bureaucracy to described as "an organizational log," and BBC reaction to complaints as "cavaller.

On the other hand, the committee almost seems to entice the Corporation into trouble with Government, complaining that it has dodged investigative journalism and depth-reporting on subjects like Ulster.

cism too; its general programing is called "safe, stereotyped, routine." But about the only thread that does run through the report is one of dissatisfaction with BBC journalism, resentment against BBC highups.

Independent Television News succeeds view that BBC news and current affairs are largely because it is simpler and has fewer now inferior to commercial TV's, and that the non-broadcasters getting in the way of those

Readers write

On Africa and England's middle class No doubt Pierre Pradesvand's letter (Moni-for March 14) is right to criticise such senacts on their family forms before saine best to the tor March 14) is right to criticise such aspects on their family farms before going back to the of life in South Africa and Rhodesia as the wage differentials between blacks and whites and the harsh conditions in some prisons provided he is just as critical of the government sponsored murders in Uganda.

But he spoils his case for a better life for blacks in the last Atrican co whites are allowed any control of government by making statements which are clearly un-

For example it is quite incorrect to state that the "great majority of blacks have been kept in illiteracy and so cannot read the Monitor." In fact the literacy rate for blacks in South Africa is 57 percent and for the 13 to 22 age group it is 80 percent. The Republic has 3,866,000 black children in school, 72,149 teachers, 13,144 schools and its spends $170 million a year on black education. I invite Mr. Pradesvand to tell Monitor readers what the similar figures are for Senegal.

Mr. Pradesvand is also very wide of the mark when he criticises South Africa for "paying pitifully low salaries to blacks." In fact black wage rates have been rising for some years at 12 percent per annum. Black gold miners have had their wages quadrupled in the last five years and this has had the effect of mines, where incidentally they get free food, accommodation and health care.

Finally Mr. Pradesvand serves no useful purpose by suggesting that whites are afraid of Africans. The heroic and very successful camues and lifestyles will change. As Denis Lawpaign by the small South African forces in paign by the small South African forces in to save Angola from Marxist tyranny shows that white Africans do not lack courage in fighting for the ideals they believe in. Isle of Man Howard L. Fry

Middle class not diminishing

i agree with Joseph Harsch's article (Monitor, March 7), "Lady Churchill is not the only one," that the plight of the middle class, retired, is an unfair and unhappy one; but I cannot share his concern that the middle class is diminishing. It is the working class that is disappearing in Britain today. Over a long period the working class have been exploited by the economic necessity and commercialism which has meant long working hours and poor pay. In the last few years the pay has risen dramatically and this has given the working class spare cash, luxury goods, holidays abroad — all the material privileges of the middle class, and in that sense they have become middle class.

desire for education, what they lack is an opportunity for education of the right kind. The Unemployed and the rational bull the matter than 18 of the right kind. The Owen does not have to look further than 18 of the right kind. unemployed and the retired also need this opportunity.

As we move into the post-industrial era valton says in his book, "Social Class, Language and Education," "Working class life will disappear with the going of routine manual jobs." Ipswich, England

South Africa and Israel

As an American Jew whose family helped build the state of Israel, I was deeply concerned to read John Cooley's piece in which he wrote that studies indicate South Africa and Isarring the research their cooperation.

Arming the racist regime in South Africa or shipping arms to Ecuador is the poorest type of public posture Israel could hope for. I urge Jews everywhere to discourage Israel from becoming the arms merchant of the Mideast. San Rafael, Calif. Jeffrey H. Gale

Criticizing British actions

Great Britain's new Foreign Secretary, David Owen, stated in his first major speech, "We in Britain will take our stand on human One Norway Street, Boston, MA 02116.

man Rights, Strasbourg, France, for ture of Irish political internees, all isler While the presses of the world were reportwithout trial in Ulster, 1971. Although the 8th ing the emergency in terms of the India they Yvonne Catchpole ish Government made every effort to control ace and hear, that is to say the literate 30 perup" the torture policy for over five years in cent of the population, including politicians proved unsuccessful and the indictment stants ockeying for power, it was the concerns of the Foreign Secretary Owen can now put words into action. He can bring to trial the torture policy in the six Ulster countles.

Injustice breeds rebellion. The torture policy is injustice at the lowest depth. Guernewood, Calif.

We invite readers letters for this column of course we cannot answer every one, and said are condensed before publication but the ful comments are welcome
Letters should be addressed to: The Oldi tian Science Monitor, international training to the control of the control

"ther" India that prevalled in the end. The "other" India are the poor, the illiterate, the traditionally manipulated. They dislnist government.

Where most of the people are illiterate, news travels by word of mouth and rumor, often embellished by vivid imaginings. The excesses of the family planning campaign when "au ele-ment of compulsion" was introduced last spring gave a grim flavor to those imaginings. Had Prime Minister Indira Gandhi not stilled her critics, she would have known about this and almost certainly would not have chosen to hold elections when she did.

it was no secret that Mrs. Gandhi's in-

Sulls in India is that the government was countryside was not reliable and that she regutrought down not on issues that preoccupied larly queried visitors from abroad about what its critics – such as preventive detention and they saw. central government's Agricultural Research Institute, came from New Delhi to boost farmers' morale. When they learned that a visitor from the United States had spent a month on two communes in China, the villagers asked her to speak. Afterward their questions were not on things like average yields or monthly wages. Rather, they asked insistently, "How do the Chinese handle family planning?

Several weeks later about 100 miles north or Bombay, where the people are among the most primitive in India, the writer decided to abandon her jeep and, with a local official as her guide, started out on foot for villages that were virtually inaccessible any other way. The villages were completely empty when we ar-

"They are hiding," said the guide in explanation. "They think we are coming to round, them up for vasectomy operations!"

This was in Maharashira, the state that had Corporation for being unkind to Labour. And the Beeb does come in for a good deal of verbal chastisement over the years the level of taste and discrimination" of the British people in music, drama and the arts - and for providing better comedy, light entertainment and sport than commercial TV - the Annan Report deals sternly with the Corporation's internationally renowned news and current affairs programs.

feeling that some of the finest attributes of the BBC are in decay and that it is suffering from loss of nerve. It agrees with the generally held BBC output is characterized by "caution, lack who do the real work.

perficial to the point of banality."

aggressive and arrogant."

Commercial television comes in for criti-

Forcible family planning toppled Mrs. Gandhi

What's wrong with the BBC and how to put it right campaign in the country.

What was evident was that abuses were built opment potential."

into the procedures. The respected Economic are not encouraged to take the law into their own hands " Sham Lai, the editor of the Times of India, in an interview, said, "The system couldn't take the strain. It was bound to fail. Emergency is proof of that. I don't agree that it had to take the form it did, but something had to be done, Things had been getting out of hand. "By the time the country had to face the consequences of the severe drought of 1972, the Congress Party had already been weakened by the split of 1969. Between 1972 and 1974 inflation was running at 50 percent. India was a food exporting country in the 20s. The country could feed itself then. In the early 50s, when capital-intensive planning was used, we didn't know about the population explosion."

India is always being asked "What are you doing about your population problem?" After all in a new category of low-interest loans the World Bank stipulates that loans would be extended only to countries which were regarded

One of the ironles of the election re- telligence about what was happening in the just passed the most ambitious sterilization as making reasonable development efforts in relations to their resource base and devel-

But it is reported that almost twice the tarhealon of speech — but on an issue that went shall be the sensibilities of the masses: the shall be the sensibilities of the sensibilities of the sensibilities of the masses: the shall be the sensibilities of the sensibilitie and Political Weekly of Bombay dared to get of 4.3 million sterilizations for 1978-77 were Riots against compulsory sterilization were renorted from places within 75 miles of New

What went wrong was that India was tackling its population problem with historically discredited methods. In taking over the British administrative and educational systems, India also took over the imperial attitude toward subordinates. Added to the complex structure of its own caste attitudes, this inix provided no guidelines for dealing with the poor when they have the vote and a secret ballot.

And the proof was in the ballot. The government's most crushing defeats were in precisely those areas where coorcive methods were most severely applied - in the north, where the Congress Party was traditionally strongest.

Mrs. Ambrose is former editor of Co-Iombia University Forum and has written extensively on developing countries. She has toured India twice, most recently in Use spring of 1976